PRESTON.

Preston, Sir Robert, of Valleyfield, Co. Perth; b. 21 April, 1740; m. 27 April, 1759, Elizabeth, dau. of George Brown, Esq. of Stockton, by whom he has no issue. Sir Robert a. as 6th Bart., at the decease of his brother, 23 March, 1800, Sir Robert Preston d. in May, 1833, but the Baronetcy being assumed by a gentleman claiming a right to its possession (the grounds of which claim we are not yet in possession of), the details are allowed to remain, and the dignity not deemed extinct.

Lineage.

The name of Preston, which is of great antiquity in North Britain, was assumed by the ancestors of the present family from their territorial possessions in Mid Lothian, in the time of MALCOLM CRAWKBURN. The first of the family upon record is LEOPHUR DE PRESTON, living temp. William the Lion, whose grandson, Sir William de Preston, Knt., was one of the Scottish nobles summoned to Berwick, by Edward I. in the competition for the Crown of Scotland, between Bruce and Bahel, after the death of King Alexander III. in 1291. This Sir William was s. by his son, Nichol de Preston, one of the Scottish Barons who swore fealty to King Edward. He d. in the beginning of the reign of David II., and was s. by his son, Sir Lawrence Preston, who was s. by his son, Sir John de Preston, a gallant soldier, high in the favor and confidence of King David Bruce, who accompanied that monarch in his unfortunate expedition into England, and, falling into the enemies' hands at the battle of Durham, in 1346, suffered several years' imprisonment in the Tower of London, and was released, only by ransom. His son, Sir Simon de Preston, witnessed a charter of donation to the Monastery of Newbold in 1306. He was s. by his son, Sir Simon de Preston, who left issue, George, (Sir) his successor.

Henry, (Sir),

Andrew, whose son,

George, of Whitchell, was great-grandfather of Sir Rurcan de Preston, who was created a Peer of Scotland, in the dignity of Baron Dinningwell, 8 June, 1669, to himself and his heirs whatsoever. His Lordship, through the favor of his royal master, James I., obtained the hand of Lady Elizabeth Butcher, eldest child of Thomas, 10th Earl of Ormonde and Essex. By this lady he left an only child, Elizabeth, Baroness Dinningwell, who m. James, 11th Duke of Ormond and Essex. By this lady he left an only child, James, 2nd Duke of Ormonde, who was impeached in 1715, and attainted, when all his English honors expired; but it is doubtful if the attainer could affect the claim of the Preston family to the Barony of Dinningwell, the line (Butler) of the attainted Duke having failed, and the dignity reverting, as it has done, to the heir general of the 1st Lord Dinningwell.

Sir Simon was s. by his eldest son, Sir George Preston, whose great-grandson, William Preston, of Craigmiller, had issue, Simon, (Sir) who succeeded to Craigmiller; and his line failed with Robert Preston, of Craigmiller, in 1639.

Henry.

The second son,

Henry Preston, living in the reigns of James IV. and James V., was father of James Preston, Esq., who acquired by charter, dated in 1544, the lands and Barony of Valleyfield, from William, Commissioner of Culross, upon the resignation of Patrick Bruce; and his descendants have ever since been designated from that estate. He was s. by his son, Archibald Preston, Esq., 2nd Baron of Valleyfield; whose grandson,

Sir John Preston, 4th Baron of Valleyfield, m. Grizel Cavel, dau. of Alexander, Commissioner of Culross, by whom, with three dau.s., he had two sons, George, his successor. Robert, a Lord of Session; from whom the Prestons of Gourton are descended.

Sir John was s. by his eldest son, I. George Preston, Esq. of Valleyfield, who was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 31 March, 1637. Sir George m. in 1634, Marian, only dau. of Hugh, 3rd Lord Sempill, and grandau. (maternally) of James, Earl of Aibercorn, and was s. by his eldest son, II. Sir William. This gentleman m. Anne, dau. of Sir James Lumsden, of Ingernery, and was s. by his eldest son, Sir William de Preston, Knt., was one of the Scottish nobles summoned to Berwick, by Edward I. in the competition for the Crown of Scotland, between Bruce and Bahel, after the death of King Alexander III. in 1291. Lineage.

The surname of this family was originally written De Puleston, and its settlement in England may be dated at the period of the Conquest. To the reign of Edward I., Sir Roger Puleston settled at Emral, Co. Flint, and was appointed by the King, after the Conquest of Wales, Collector of the Taxes levied there; he was also nominated Sheriff, and Keeper for Life of the Co. of Anglesy: but the Welsh, not relishing the taxes, seised upon the tax-gatherer, and caused him to be hung. His son, Richard Puleston, was appointed Sheriff of the Co. of Caernarvon, and represented the Borough of Caernarvon in Parliament, while John Puleston was Member for the County.

Lineage.

Margaret (Mar). Countess of M., sister her brother, Thomas, 3d of the Old Earls of M., in 1727, and marrying William, Earl of Douglas, that nobleman assumed the designation of Earl of Douglas and M. of this marriage there were two children,

James, who s. to the honors. Isabel, who became, eventually, Countess of M. The Countess was divorced from Lord Douglas, and m. 2ndly, Sir John Swinton, of Swinton, and, dying in 1339, her son,

James, became Earl of Douglas and M. This distinguishing chieftain, making an excursion into England, in 1385, penetrated to the gates of York; whence returning spoil-laden, his Lordship had many skirmishes with the English at Newcastle, in one of which he became possessed of the person of Henry Percy (Hotspur), and, under the pretense that he should erect it on the pinnacle of his own castle, Percy retorted with an oath, "Thou shalt never bear it out of Northumberland!" and to uphold by arms the declaration, himself and his brother, Ralph Percy, attacked Douglas in his camp at Otterburn, 19 Aug., 1385, when a furious conflict ensued, whereof Lord Douglas fell; but the Percys eventually sustained a signal defeat. While Douglas lay wounded, in the brunt of the battle, one of his kingly companions (Sinclair) inquired, "How goes it, cousin?" "But so praiséd be to God (replied the dying nobleman) few of my ancestors have died in chambers, or in beds. Avenge me, for I die. My heart faints too rapidly. Raise again my banner, and shout 'Douglas!' But tell not friend nor foe how it fares with me, for my enemies would exult, and my friends be disconsolate." The Earl married, but leaving no legitimate issue, his only sister, Isabel, succeeded as Countess of M. while the Earldom of Douglas passed to the male heir of that family. Lord Douglas and M., left an illegitimate son, Sir William Douglas, upon whom he had conferred the Barony of Drumlanrig, Co. Dumfries, by charter sans date. This Sir William, who was a very eminent Commander in the wars with England, was deputed Ambassador to that kingdom, in 1412, to solicit the release of James I. of Scotland, and obtained a charter, dated 20 Nov., 1412, from that Monarch, all written in the King's own hand, upon vellum, confirming to himself and his heirs the several Baronies of Drumlanrig, Hawick, and Selkirk. Lineage.

This family is maternally descended from

Sir John Ramsay, Knt. of Balmaine and Tarque, Co. Kincardine, who was created by James III., a Lord of Parliament, in 1433, and sate, under the title of Lord Bothwell. Adhering, however, to his unfortunate Sovereign, against whom the nobles of Scotland rebelled, his Lordship was outlawed, and his estates subjected to confiscation in 1481, by the first Parliament of James IV., while that Monarch conferred the dignity of Earl of Bothwell upon Hepburn, Lord Hales, whose descendant became the third husband of Mary, Queen of Scots, and was the last of his family that enjoyed the Peerage. In 1640, the disgraced Lord received, however, a royal pardon, but under the simple designation of John Ramsay: and he obtained, at the same time, some lands in the Co. of Forfar and Wigtoun, which favours were followed by a charter, in 1618, of the Barony of Balmaine. The grandson of this personage,

Gilbert Ramsay, Esq., was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 3 Sept., 1629, and the title passed, in regular succession, to

Godfrey Stultz or Himmelbo, of Under Walden, chief of the Swiss auxiliaries, received the honor of Knighthood, but subsequent dissensions, being upon the less fortunate side, Sir Godfrey was obliged to seek an asylum in England, where it appears he took up his permanent abode, and from him descended

REAY

REAY, LORD, (Eric Mac Kay), of Reay, Co. Caithness, in the Peerage of Scotland, and a Bart. of Nova Scotia; & a 7th Baron, at the decease of his cousin, 26 Jun., 1797.

Lineage.

This very ancient family, according to the best authorities, held possessions in the north of Scotland seven centuries ago; which possessions were originally denominated Strathnaver, but more recently Lord Reay's Country.

Oso Mackay, descended from Angus Dow Macky (who is styled leader of 4,000 Mackys, of Strathnaver), obtained extensive territorial grants in the Counties of Caithness and Sutherland, in 1460, and 1507. He fell at Flodden, and was s. by his son.

John Mackay, who was s. by his brother, Donald Mackay, characterised by historians as "a great General, and a wise and political gentleman." This personage was at the battle of Solway-Mosse, and returned to Edinburgh with the King three days after the conflict, when his Majesty bestowed upon him, in requital of his faithful services, the forested lands of several individuals, by charter, dated 28 Nov., 1542. He d. in 1565, and was s. by his son.

Y Mackay, who obtained his father's lands from the Earl of Huntly, to whom they had been granted by the Crown. He had several conflicts with the Earl of Sutherland, to whom surrendering himself in 1560, he was sent prisoner to the Castle of Edinburgh. Being released, he returned to Strathnaver, where he conducted himself thoroughly until his death, in 1571. His wife was Barbara Sinclair, dau. of the Laird of Durn, and he was s. by his son.

Hugh Mackay, a personage of a very different disposition to that of his predecessors. He is described as "very liberal, if not rather inclining towards prodigality, and yet preserving the ancient inheritance of his family free from any burden of debt. Finding his countrymen consumed almost with civil discords and slaughters, by the iniquity of the times, he conducted himself so that in a short space they were finally reconciled. He delighted in hunting and public conventions; but fearing that such meetings would produce divisions, he gave them over, till in the end all quarrels were quite forgotten." He m. 1st, Lady Elizabeth Sinclair, 2nd dau. of George, 4th Earl of Caithness, by whom he had an only child, Christian, m. to John Macintosh, of Dalmeny. He espoused, 2ndly, in 1589, Lady Jam Gordon, eldest dau. of Alexander, 11th Earl of Sutherland, and dying, beloved and bewailed, in 1614, was s. by his elder son.

Sir Donald Mackay, Knt. of Far, was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 18 March, 1657, and elevated to the Peerage by the dignity of Baron Reay, with remainder to his heirs male for ever, bearing the name and arms of Mackay, 20 June, 1688. His Lordship, who was a distinguished and gallant soldier, took an active part, during the civil war, in favor of royalty; but being one of those excepted from pardon in the treaty between the Covenanters and King Charles, he was obliged to retire to Denmaik, where he died in Feb., 1649. He m. 1st, in 1610, Barbara, eldest dau. of Kenneth, Lord Kintail, by whom he had John, his successor, with two other sons and two daughters. His Lordship espoused, 2ndly, Rachel Winterfield of Harrison, by whom he had two other sons. Of this latter marriage Lord Reay procured a sentence of nullity, and then married Elizabeth, dau. of Robert Thompson, of Greenwich; but the Judges' Deligates, at London, having found that Rachel Winterfield, or Harrison, was the wife of his Lordship, she went into Scotland, in 1637, to prosecute him for an alimint, and he was ordered to pay her £400 sterling for by-pass maintenance, and £300 yearly during his non-adherence. He was s. by his eldest son,

John, 2nd Baron, who, like his father, took up arms in the Royal cause. His Lordship m. Barbara, dau. of Donald Mackay, of Scoury, by whom he had, with two younger sons, Donald, Master of Reay, who predeceased him, leaving by Anne, dau. of Sir George Monro, of Culcairn, a son, by whom his Lordship was succeeded, and the lives of the survivors of them, the accumulated fund, then, to be expended in the purchase of estates, and to be conveyed to the eldest male descendant of his three sons, with the benefit of Survivorship. This family traces its pedigree to a remote era in English history.

RUTVEN.

RUTVEN, Baron (James Rutven), of Freeland, Co. Perth, in the Peerage of Scotland; b. 17 Oct., 1777; s. as 5th Baron, at the demise of his father, 27 Dec., 1789; m. 20 Dec., 1813, Mary, dau. of Walter Campbell, Esq. of Shawfield, North Britain, by whom he has no issue.

Lineage.

The ancient family of Rutven derives from Tincn, a person of Saxon or Danish blood, who settled in Scotland, under Davi. L., and whose son, William the Lion, lord of the Manors of Rutven, Tunbarne, and other lands in the Co. Perth, was progenitor of Sir William de Rutven, who was created a Lord of Parliament 29 Jan., 1407-8. His Lordship d. in 1529, and was s. by his grandson, William, 2nd Lord Rutven, an extraordinary Lord of Session, who m. Janet, eldest dau. and co-heir of Patrick, Lord Halyburton, of Dirleton, with whom he obtained that Barony, and had, with other issue, Patrick, who s. as 3rd Lord Rutven and Dirleton. This nobleman was one of the principal actors in the murder of David Rizzio, 9 March, 1566, but being afterwards abandoned by Darnley, he fled into England, and d. there, 13 June, 1566. His Lordship is included in Walpole's catalogue of royal and noble authors, having written a narrative of that sanguinary deed, without one expression of regret or compassion. He was s. by his eldest son, William, 4th Lord Rutven, who participated in the assassination of Rizzio, and fled into England with his father; but eventually making his peace, obtained a pardon after the decease of the late Lord, and was created Earl of Gowrie 23 Aug., 1611; the lands and Barony of Gowrie, which belonged to the monastery of Scoone, being erected by royal charter into an Earl-dom. His Lordship was tried and convicted of treason 28 May, 1654, and executed in the evening of the same day; but his estates and honors were restored to his eldest son.

James, 2nd Earl of Gowrie, at whose decease in 1688, the honors devolved upon his brother, John, 3rd Earl, who fell, with his brother, Alexander Rutven, in an attack upon the life of James VI., at Perth, 2 Aug., 1601. The dead bodies of the Rutvens were afterwards arranged and convicted of treason at Edinburgh, and the honors and the whole of the estates of the deceased declared forfeited by Parliament.

William, 2nd Lord Rutven, had a younger son,

THOMAS ALEXANDER RUTVEN, of Freeland, Co. Perth, who d. in 1639, and was s. by his eldest son,

WILLIAM RUTVEN, of Freeland, who m. Elizabeth, eldest dau. of Sir William Moncrieff, of Moncrieff, and, dying (of the plague) in 1648, was s. by his only son, THOMAS RUTVEN, of Freeland, who was elevated to the Peerage, as LORD RUTVEN, of Freeland, in 1531. His Lordship m. Isabella, dau. of Robert, Lord Balfour, of Borleigh, by whom he left two daws, Anne, who d. without issue, and Elizabeth, who m. Sir Francis Rutven, Knt.; besides an only son, his successor in 1673.

1. CHARLES-CRISL-JOH., Marquess of Granby, b. 16 May, 1815.
3. George-John, b. 22 June, 1820.
4. Elizabeth-Frederica. m. 7 March, 1821, to Andrew R. Drummond, Esq., eldest son of Mr. and Lady Mary Drummond, of Cadzalls, near Southampton.
Her Grace the Duchess of Rutland d. suddenly, at Belvoir Castle, 29 Nov., 1825. The Duke is a Kn. of the Garter, Lord Lieut. and Custos-Rotulorum of the Co. Leicester, and Col. of the Leicester Militia; Recorder of Cambridge, Grantham, and Scarborough, and a Trustee of the British Museum.

Lineage.

"Though none of this family arrived to the dignity of Peerage, until the reign of Henry VIII.," says Dugdale, "yet were they persons of great note in Northumberland for many ages before; for, in the 25th of Henry II., Henry de Manners paid eighty marks for liberty of his father's lands in that County." This Henry is not, however, mentioned in the pedigree of the family; in which the first name that occurs is

Sir Robert de Manners, Kn., Lord of the manor of Ethale (now Etal), Co. Northumberland, from whom descended

Sir Robert de Manners, Kn., who, in the 17th Edward I., was returned into Chancery, among the principal persons in the Co. of Northumberland, certified to bear arms by descent from their ancestors. This Sir Robert signaled himself by the defence of Norham Castle, of which he was Governor in the 1st year of Edward III. The circumstance is thus stated in Barnes's History of that Monarch's reign:— "The Scots, encouraged by former successes, and desiring to make Edward's youth, on the very night of that day wherein King Edward was crowned, intended to take Norham Castle, between the Marches of England and Scotland, by surprise; and so well they managed their design, that about sixteen of them had already mounted the walls; but the Captain, Sir Robert Manoe, being warned of the matter beforehand, by one of the garrisons, who was a Scotsman, had so well provided to receive them, that, of those who had mounted, he took five or six, and put the rest to the sword; he having called upon Edward to seek the disappointment, retreating. In the 14th year of the same King, Edward, Sir Robert served in Parliament for the Co. Northumberland. In the next year he obtained royal permission to strengthen and embellish his mansion of Ethale, which was made of stones and lime: and in that year was commissioned, with others, to treat with David Bruce and his adherents about a peace. Sir Robert m. Joane, dau. and heir of Sir Henry Strother, Kn., of Newton-Glendalough; and, dying in 1355, was s. by his son, Sir John Manners, Kn., who was s. by his son, Sir John Manners, Kn., constituted Sheriff of the Co. of Northumberland in 1413. This Sir John was accused, with his son, in the reign of Henry VI., of the death of William Heron, Esq., and Robert Atkinson; and being prosecuted for the same by Sir Robert Umphreville, Kn., and Isabel, then the widow of William Heron, an award was made, bearing date 38 Sept., 1430, by John, then prior of Durham, and Thomas, prior of Tlamouth, to whom the affair was referred, that the said John de Manners, and John his 2nd son, should cause 500 marks to be sung for the health of the soul of the same William Heron, within one year then next ensuing, and paying unto Sir Robert Umphreville and Isabel, to the use of her the said Isabel, and her children by the said William Heron, 200 marks. Sir John Manners m. Anna, dau. of Sir John Maitlem, Kn., and, dying in 1430, was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Robert Manners, who, in the 38th year of Henry VI., was one of the conservators of the truce then made with the Scots. He m. Joan, dau. of Sir Robert Ogle, and was father of

Sir Robert Manners, Sheriff of Northumberland in the 3rd of Henry VI., and M.P. for that Co. in five years afterwards. In the 3rd and 4th years of Edward IV., he was again Sheriff of Northumberland, an office of great power and profit prior of the reign of Edward IV.; for the Sheriff of that Co. never accounted to the King in his Exchequer, but received the issues and profits to their own use, with all debts, fines, and amencements, within their jurisdiction, and all emoluments accruing from alienations, intrusions, wards, marriages, &c., in order to encourage them to be upon their guard against the Scots. This Sir Robert m. Eleanor, eldest sister and co-heir of Edmund, Lord Ros, of Hamlake, Triestub, and Belvoir, who d. 13 Oct., 1408, and dau. of Thomas, Lord Ros, to which Barony her Ladyship succeeded, and to considerable possessions, which devolved upon her husband, with Belvoir Castle, Co. Lincoln, built by Robert de Toden, a noble Norman. The issue of this marriage were two sons and three daughters. Sir Robert was s. by his elder son,

Sir George Manners, who, at the decease of his mother, in 1469, s. to the Barony of Ros, and the Baronies of Vaux, Trushub, and Belvoir. His Lordship m. Anna, dau. and heir of Sir Thomas St. Leger, Kn. by Anna Plantagenet, sister of Edward IV., divorced at her own suit from Henry Holland, Duke of Exeter, by whom he had five sons and six daughts. He d. in 1513, and was s. by his eldest son,

Thomas, 13th Lord Ros, who was installed a Knight of the Garter in the 17th year of Henry VIII., and created Earl of Rutland, 16 June, 1525. This nobleman, who enjoyed in a high degree the favor of Henry VIII., filled the most important offices in that monarch's reign, and obtained for his good services a grant of the manor of Muston, Co. Leicester, part of the possessions of the dissolved priory of Osulston. His Lordship m. twice; but had issue by his 2nd wife, Eleanor, dau. of Sir William Paston, only, of which,

Derby (which Sir George died in the 9th Eliz.) was titled of thirty Lordships and manors; and for his magnificence and hospitality, was called "King of the Peak." Sir George Manners, who m. in 1544, Grace, 2nd dau. of Henry Pierpont, and had, with other issue,

Lineage.

This family flourished for several generations in the Co. of Devon, before it removed into Cornwall; and, in the beginning of the 18th century, we find Walter Eliot returned amongst the gentry of that shire. The Cornwall pedigree made in 1690 commences with

John Eliot, who m. Jane, dau. of John Bonville, of Shute, Co. Devon; and whose great-grandson, Richard Eliot, Esq. having purchased the site, &c. of the Priory of St. Germans, and giving it the name of Port Eliot, resided with great hospitality there. This gentleman d. in 1690, and was s. by his son,

Sir John Eliot, Knt. of Port Eliot, M.P. for the Co. of Cornwall, in the third of Charles I. This gentleman, a strenuous opponent of the Court, was appointed by the House of Commons one of the Managers of the impeachment of the Duke of Buckingham; for which, with Sir Dudley Digges, the other Manager, he was committed to the Tower, but was soon afterwards released. In 1688, Sir John Eliot, with other Members of the House of Commons, was again sent to the Tower, for refusing to answer before the Privy-Council for Parliamentary conduct, and on the 29th of May, in that year, an information was exhibited in the Star-Chamber against Sir John and his companions for their undutiful speeches; upon which charge, being afterwards arraigned before the Court of King's Bench, they were adjudged to be imprisoned during the King's pleasure, and to give security for their good behaviour; and Sir John was also fined £200. These gentlemen were subsequently offered their freedom, upon the terms of making submission; but they rejected the proposition, and Sir John Eliot died in the Tower, 27 Nov., 1692. He had m. Redgind, dau. and co-heir of Richard Gely, Esq., and had a numerous family, of which,

John, the eldest son, s. to the estates; and, dying in 1665, left an only son,

Daniel, who, hearing an only dau., bequested his estates to his cousin,

Edward Eliot, Esq. (grandson of Nicholas Eliot, son of Sir John Eliot), and this gentleman, dying in 1729, without issue, the property devolved upon his brother,

Richard Eliot, Esq. of Port Eliot, M.P., Auditor and Receiver-General to the Prince of Wales. This gentleman m. 4 March, 1736, Harriot, dau. of the Right Hon. James Craggs, Secretary-of-Stats in the reign of George I., by whom he had three sons and six daus, and was s. at his decease, in 1748, by his eldest son, Edward Eliot, Esq., M.P. for the Co. of Cornwall, who assumed, by sign manual, the additional surname of Craggs, and was elevated to the Peerage, 30 Jan., 1748, by the title of Baron Eliot, of St. Germans, Co. Cornwall.

diplomatist of the first grade, at different European Courts, obtained his Irish Barony by creation in 1791; and was enrolled amongst the Peers of the United Kingdom, 31 July, 1801.

Lineage.
The two families of Fitzherbert of Norbury, and Fitzherbert of Somerset-Herbert and Tissington, in Derbyshire, can be traced in that County as early as the origin of surnames. They are said to have been of the same stock as the ancient baronial House of Fitz-Herbert, of which, HENRY-FITZHERBERT was Lord-Chamberlain to King Stephen, and was Lord of the Forest of Dene, in Gloucestershire. On this subject a memorable dispute arose between Brooke the Hereditary, and Camden, in conse-quenoe of an assertion of the latter in his Britton's:
'Herbert (says Camden) married the sister of William,
Earl of Hereford, and in her right was Lord of Dene,
from whom descended the noble family of Herbert;
hence also, if we shall credit the heralds and escutcheons of arms, ANTHONY FITZHERBERT, the great Lawyer, and Lord-Chief-Justice of England, took his original,
But I think, he rather descended from the worshipful family of Fitz-Herberts, in Derbyshire.
To this Brooke answered, 'Whoever shall derive the said Anthony, or any of that family of Fitz-Herberts, from any other original than that of Herbert, who m. the sister of William, Earl of Hereford, have and shall err from the truth."
SIR WILLIAM FITZHERBERT, 5th Lord of Norbury, to whom HENRY III. granted free warren in Norbury, anno 1293, had three sons,

industry and economy, retrieved the family estate, which had been materially injured during the Civil Wars. He m.

Hertford, and co-heir to the Barony of Ogles; d. 17 April, 1791; m. 2 Feb., 1821, Frances-Mary, dau. and sole heir of Bamburgh Gascoyne, Esq. (upon which occasion, his Lordship assumed, by Royal permission, the surname of "GASCOYNE" before that of "CEIL"), by whom he has issue,

iii. Euston-Brownlow—William, b. 24 April, 1834.

v. Blanche—Mary—Harriet.

His Lordship, who is High Steward of Hertford, and Colonel of the Hertfordshire Militia, inherited the honors, as 2nd Marquess, at the decease of his father, 13 June, 1823.

Lineage.

This family was founded by The Hon. Robert Cecil (youngest son of William Cecil, Lord Burghley, Queen Elizabeth's celebrated High-Treasurer, by his 2nd wife, Mildred, dau. of Sir Anthony Cooke), who received the honor of Knighthood in 1581, was sworn of the Privy Council, appointed Secretary of State, and, subsequently, Master of the Court of Wards, in the reign of Elizabeth, but did not attain the honors of the Peerage until after the accession of James I, when he was created 13 May, 1603, Baron Cecil, of Essendon, Co. Hertford; advanced to the Marquessate of Cran- borne, Co. Dorset; 20 Aug., 1804; and created Earl of Salisbury 4 May, 1805 ; during which periods he continued Secretary of State, but succeeded, subsequently, at the decease of the Earl of Dorset, to the Lord High-Treasurer- ship. Although Secretary Cecil was remarkable for de- formity of person, it appears by the following quaint epistle from William Brown to the Earl of Shrewsbury, dated 19 Sept., 1609, (from Lodge's Illustr. Vol. iii.), that he was not deficient in gallantry: "I send your Lordship," says Brown, "here enclosed some verses composed by Mr. Secretary, who got Hales to frame a ditty unto them. The occasion was, as I hear, that the young Lady Derby," (wife of Earl William, dau. of Lord Oxford), "wearing about her neck, in her bosom, a picture, which was in dainty tablet, the Queen enquery it, asked what fine jewel that was. The Lady Derby was curious to excuse the shewing of it; but the Queen would have it, and opening it, and finding it to be Mr. Secretary's, snatcht it away.
and tied it upon her shoe, and walked along with it there: then she took it thence, and pinned it on her elbow, and wore it some time there also, which Mr. Secretary being told of, made these verses, and had Hales to sing them in his Chamber. It was told her Majesty, that Mr. Secretary had rare music and songs; she would needs hear them; and so this ditty was sung, which you see first written. More verses there be likewise, whereof some or all were likewise sung. I do boldly send these things to your Lordship, which I would not do to any one else, for I hear they are very secret. Some of these verses argue that he repines not, though her Majesty please to grace others, and contents himself with the favor he hath." The Earl of Salisbury married also Elizabeth, sister of the unhappy Henry Brooke, Lord Cobham, and d. worn out with business, 17 Feb., 1611-12. In his last illness, he was heard to say to Sir Walter Cope, "Enae and pleasure quack to hear of death; but my life, full of cares and miseries, desireth to be dissolved." He had some yeers previously (1603) addressed e letter to sir James Harrington, the Poet, in pretty much the same tone. "Good Knight," saith the minister, "rest content, and give heed to one that hath sorrowed in the bright lustre of a Court, and gone heavily on even the best seeming fair ground. To a great task to prove one's honesty, and yet not mar one's fortune. You have tasted a little hereof in our blessed Queen's time, who was more than a man, and, in truth, sometimes less than a woman. I wish I waited now in your presence chamber, with ease et my food, and rest in my bed. I am pushed from the shore of comfort, and know not where the winds end waves of a Court will bear me. I know it bringeth little comfort on earth; and here it is, I reckon, no wise man, that looketh this way to Heaven." His Lordship was d. by his only son, William, 2nd Earl, KG. This nobleman m. in Dec. 1626, Catherine, youngest dau. of Thomas Howard, Earl of Suffolk, and was s. at his decease by his grandson, James, 3rd Earl, KG. Margaret, dau. of John Manser, Earl of Rutland, and was s. in 1633, by his eldest son, James, 4th Earl. This nobleman, being a convert to the Roman Catholic faith, was presented by the Grand Jury of Midleshires, immediately before the Revolution of 1688, as a popish recusant; and on the 28 Oct., 1688, the Earl of Peterborough saith to his Lordship and the Earl of Suffolk, "I will not have you impeached for high treason, for departing from their allegiance, and being reconciled to the Church of Rome, but the prosecution was eventually abandoned. SANDWICH, EARL OF (John-William Montagu), Co. Kent; Viscount Hinchingbrooke, and Baron Montagu, of St. Neot's, both in the Co. Huntingdon; 4. 5 Nov., 1791, s. by 7th Earl, upon the decease of his father, 20 May, 1818.

Lineage.

This family is descended from a common ancestor with the ducal house of Middlesex, with the extinct Earls of Halfax, and with the late Duke of Montague. Its immediate progenitor was

SIR SIONEY MONTAGU, KNL, Master of the Court of Requests to CHARLES I., who represented the Co. Huntingdon in Parliament, in 1640, but was expelled, and committed to the Tower, in 1642, for declining to subscribe an oath, framed by the house, "That they would live and die with their General, Lord Essex." Sir Sidney m. Pauline, 3rd dau. of John Pepys, Esq. of Cottenham, Co. Cambridge, and, dying 25 Sept., 1644, was s. by his only surviving son,

SIR EDWARD MONTAGU, KNL, M.P. for the Co. Huntingdon, a very distinguished Military Commander under the Parliamentarian banner, during the Civil War, and subsequently Joint High-Admiral of England, in which capacity, having had sufficient influence to induce the whole Fleet to acknowledge the restored Monarchy, he was elevated to the Peerage, by Charles II., 12 July, 1660, by the titles of Baron Montagu, Viscount Hinchingbrooke, and Earl of Sandwich; his Majesty conferring also upon his Lordship the Noble Order of the Garter, and appointing him Master of the Great Wardrobe, Admiral of the Narrow Seas, and Lieut.-Admiral to his Royal Highness the Duke of York, Lord-High-Admiral of England. At the subsequent coronation of the King, his Lordship carried St. Edward's staff. He m. Jenima, dau. of John, Lord Crew, of Sime, by whom he had six sons and four daughters; of which,

Edward WORLHEY-MONTAGU, Esq., who m. Lady Mary Pierrepont, dau. of Evelyn, '1st Duke of Kingston. This celebrated woman so well known as Lady Mary WORLHEY-MONTAGU,* accompanied

* Lady Mary Wortley Montagu was born at Thoresby, in Nottinghamshire, the seat of her father the Duke of Kingston, about 1689, and lost her mother, Mary, dau. of William, Earl of Denbigh, in 1704. She was educated under the superintendence of Bishop Burnet, and obtained a high degree of mental cultivation. Amongst her other talents was an extraordinary facility in learning languages; and in the assemblage of foreign embassies from different countries, of which the society at Pera and Belgrade, was composed, she had daily opportunities of extending her knowledge and practice of them. She even attempted the Turkish language, under the tuition of one nied her husband in his embassy to the Turkish Court, and her letters threaten to obtain the highest degree of popularity. By this lady Mr. Montagu left a son Edward, who d. unn. and a dau. Mary, by his first wife, Betsy, daughter of John, Ear. grandn., James, Lord Warrcliffes, has inherited the Worlty estates.

His Lordship, who, after the Restoration, attained the highest renown as a Naval Officer, fell in the great fleet fight with the Dutch, off Southwell Bay, 29 May, 1627, and was s. by his eldest son.

Edward, 2nd Earl, who m. Anna, 4th dau. of Richard Bayly, Earl of Burlington, and dying in Feb., 1680, was s. by his son.

This nobleman, an eminent diplomatist and statesman, assisted at the celebrated congress of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1748. His Lordship was subsequently Secretary of State, and First Lord of the Admiralty. He m. in March, 1740-1, Judith, dau. of Charles, Viscount Fane, of the Kingdom of Ireland, and was s. at his demise, in 1772, by his only surviving son, Catherine-Caroline, m. 1 Dec., 1851, to Count Alexander Walski, and d. 29 April, 1894, leaving two daughters.

His Lordship died in May, 1816.

Of Mr. Worley’s interpreters. For several years after her return, and before the demand, she resided upon the Continent, but came back to England in 1701, the year in which Mr. Montagu died. At that period she is that described by Mrs. Montagu, in a letter to her sister, Mrs. William Robinson. * You have lately returned us from Italy a very extraordinary personage, Lady Mary Worley. When nature is at the trouble of making a very singular person, time does right in respecting it. Medals are preserved, when common coin is worn out; and as great geese are rather matters of curiosity than use, this lady seems to be reserved for a wonder to more than one generation. She does not look older than when she went abroad; has not more than the vivacity of fifteen; and a memory which perhaps is as acute. Several people visited her out of curiosity, which she did not like. I visit her because her husband and mine were cow-herdsmen; and though she has not any foolish partiality for her husband and his relations, I was very graciously received, and you may imagine entertained by one who neither thinks, speaks, eats, or drinks, like any body. Her domesticity is made up of all nations; and when you get into her drawing-room, you imagine: that you are in the first story of a Tower of Babel. Tom, the great servant, takes your name at the door; he gives it to an Italian, who delivers it to a Frenchman; the Frenchman to a Swiss; and the Swiss to the porter; so that by the time you get to her Ladyship’s presence, you have changed your name five times without the expense of an Act of Parliament.” Lady Mary Worley-Montagu d. 31 Aug., 1702.

Scarborough, Earl of (John Lumley-Savile), Viscount Lumley, and Baron Lumley, of Lumley Castle, Co. Durham, in the Peerage of England; Viscount Lumley, of Waterford, in the Peerage of Ireland; s. as 8th Earl, 21 Feb., 1835.

Lineage.

The surname of this family was assumed from Lumley on the Wear, in the Bishopric of Durham, and the family deduces its lineage from

Ludlow (son of Osbert de Lumley), who m. Aluminium, dau. of Aled, Earl of Northumberland, by Edgina, dau. of Ethelred II. This Ludlow, who was a nobleman of great popularity in the time of the Conqueror, was murdered by means of his Christer, Chaplain to Walcher, Bishop of Durham; a crime soon after avenged by the populace of Durham, who sacrificed both the Chaplain and the Prelate to their just resentment. The eldest son of Ludlow, assuming the surname of Lumley, s. as Uchter de Lumley, and from him lineally descended Roger de Lumley, who m. Sybil, one of the daughters and co-heirs of the great Northumberland feudal Baron, Hown de Morwick, and was s. by his son,

Sir Robert de Lumley, who m. Lucia, one of the three sisters and co-heirs of William, Robert, and Thomas de Thweng, Barons Thweng, and was s. by his son,

Sir Marmarke de Lumley, Knt., who first assumed the arms of the ancient House of Thweng, which arms the family have ever since borne. This Sir Marmaduke was s. by his eldest son,

Robert de Lumley, who d. unm., 48 Edward III., and a minor, was s. by his brother,

Sir Ralph de Lumley, Knt., who was summoned to Parliament among the Barons of the Realm, from 1384 to 1390. This nobleman was a Deputy-Governor of Berwick-upon-Tweed, under Henry de Percy, Earl of Northumberland, in the 15th of Richard II., and obtained royal permission, in the 16th of the same month, to convert his manor-house of Lumley into a castle. His Lordship joining, subsequently, however, in the rebellion of Thomas de Holland, Earl of Kent, was attained, and died in the field of battle. He had m. Eleanor, dau. of John, Lord Neville, of Raby, and sister of Ralph, Earl of Westmorland, and left, with three sons, four sons of whom the youngest, Marmaduke, was successively Master of Trinity-Hall, Cambridge, and Chancellor of that University, Bishop of Carlisle (1430), Treasurer of England (1446), and Bishop of Lincoln (1451). Thomas, the eldest son, d. in 1404, and was s. by his brother,

Sir John de Lumley, Lord Lumley, who, doing homage in the 6th of Henry IV., had livery of all castles, manors, and lands, whereof Sir Ralph Lumley, his father, was seised at the time of his attaint and was restored in blood by Parliament in 1411. This nobleman was actively engaged in the French wars of Henry IV., and in those of Henry V.; in the 16th year of whose reign he lost his life with Thomas, Duke of Clarence, at the battle of Baugy, in Anjou (13 April, 1431), and was s. by his only son, Thomas Lumley, who obtained from Parliament, in 1461, a reversal of the attainder of his grandfather, and was summoned, as a Baron, from 1461 to 1479, to which latter year he is supposed to have died. His Lordship m. Margaret, dau. of Sir James Harrington, and was s. by his only son.

Sta Gentis, Lord Lumley, who does not appear to have been summoned at any time to Parliament. This nobleman was Sheriff of Northumberland, a powerful office in those days, in the 2nd year of Edward IV. His Lordship s. Elizabeth, dau., and heir of Roger Thornton, Esq., an opulent Merchant of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, with whose bastard son, Giles Thornton, he had, subsequently, procured litigation, until, at length, he slew the said Giles at Windsor. His Lordship's eldest son, Thomas Lumley, pre-deceased. But, left four sons and three daus., by his wife, Elizabeth Plantagenet, natural dau. of Edward IV., by Lady Elizabeth Lucy, Lord Lumley d. in the 23rd year of Henry VII., and was s. by his grandson.

Richard, Lord Lumley, who had summons to Parliament in 1509. His Lordship m. Anne, dau. of Sir John Conyers, K.G., of Hornby Castle, Co. York, by whom he left two sons,

John, his successor.

Anthony, who m. a. dau. of Richard Gray, Esq., Co. Northumberland, and left

Richard, who m. Anne, dau. of — Kentwich, Esq., and had, with other issue, Richard, (Sir) of whom hereafter, as 1st Viscount Lumley.

His Lordship d. in 1510, and was s. by his elder son,

John, Lord Lumley, summoned to Parliament in 1514. This nobleman was one of the Barons who signed, in the 22nd year of Henry VIII., the memorable letter to Pope Clement VII., intimating, that unless his holiness complied with the King's wishes regarding his divorce from Queen Catherine, that the papal supremacy would be much endangered in England. In the same year, he was one of the chief of those Northern Lords who appeared in the insurrection, called the Pilgrimage of Grace; he shared, however, the royal clemency. His Lordship m. Joan, dau. of Henry, Lord Scroop, of Botonby, by whom he had an only son,

Giles, who was impeached in the treason of Lord Darcy, Sir Thomas Percy, and others, was committed to the Tower, and convicted and executed. He m. Jane, 2nd dau., and co-heir of Sir Richard Anighty, by whom he had two daws, and a son,

His Lordship was s. by his grandson,

John, who was restored in blood by an Act of Parliament passed in 1547, whereby it was enacted that the said John and his heirs male should enjoy the dignity of a Baron. This nobleman was one of the Peers who sat in judgment upon Mary, Queen of Scots, and Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex. His Lordship m. twice, but dying issueless, 11 April, 1609, the ancient Barony of Lumley expired (the Act of Parliament, which restored his Lordship to the dignity of Lord Lumley, not having repealed the attainder of his father), as did the Barony of the new creation, it being limited to heirs male only, while the estates devolved by his Lordship's will and by deed of settlement, upon his kinsman,

Sir Richard Lumley, Knt. (refer to the Hon. Anthony Lumley, grandson of Richard, Lord Lumley), who was elevated to the Peerage of Ireland, as Viscount Limerick, of Limerick, 12 July, 1638. This nobleman, adhering faithfully to the King during the Civil Wars, made Lumley, in 1642, a garrison, and was made a Private Commander under Prince Rupert, marched with that general into the West of England, and was at the siege of Bristol, where he remained until its surrender, in 1645. His Lordship m. Frances, dau. of Henry Shelly, Esq. of Wimingham Park, in Sussex, and was s. on his decease by his grandson.

John Lumley, by Mary, dau. and eventually one of the heirs of Sir Henry Compton, K.B. of Bramble Teigh, in Sussex, who was created Baron Lumley, of Lumley Castle, with remainder, in default of male issue, to his brother, Henry. Lineage.

The founder of the ancient and far-spreading family of Scott in North Britain.

Uchtredus Filiius Scott, was witness to the foundation charters of the Abbeys of Holyrood House and Selkirk, by David II, in the years 1128 and 1130. It does not appear, however, that this person had assumed the name of Scott as a surname, but that he was designated "Filius Scoti," as the son of a Scotman, to distinguish him from other persons called Uchtred, which was then a common Christian name beyond the Tweed. This Uchtred was father of Richard, who did assume the surname of Scott, and was living in the reigns of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion. This Richard Scott founded the Priory of St. Andrews, and d. in 1138, leaving two sons,

Richard, ancestor of the Dukes of Buccleugh;

Sir Michael Scott, a person of great power in the Co. Fife, about the middle of the twelfth century. This gentleman m. Margarett, dau. of Duncan Synar, of that ilk, by whom he had one son, Duncan, with whose consent, and that of his lady, Sir Michael made a donation to the Monastery of Dunfermline, "pro salute anime sume," &c. &c., of the lands of Garcmumen, in Fife-shire. The great-grandson of this Sir Michael,

Sir Michael Scott, 2nd Baron of Balweary, was a person of very extraordinary abilities, and made a remarkable figure at the time in which he lived. After pursuing, with unusual success, the study of languages, belles lettres, and mathematics at home, Sir Michael travelled into France, where he remained several years, and thence passed into Germany, where he spent some time at the Court of Frederick II. The extraordinary discoveries of Sir Michael, in the science of chemistry, obtained him the character of a magician, and to this day there are marvelous tales told in Scotland of his communications with the dead. In the year 1291, Sir Michael Scott and Sir Michael de Wemys were, by the States of the nation, deputed Ambassadors Extraordinary to the Court of Norway, to bring home Queen Margaret, then the undoubted heir to the Crown of Scotland, and who was to have espoused Prince Edward of England; but, unfortunately, her Majesty died at Orkney, in her way to Scotland, in 1291. Sir Michael d. about the year 1304, and from him lineally descended

Sir William Scott, of Balweary, who, in the lifetime of his father, was put in possession of the lands and Barony of Inveriel, and was long designated by that title. This gentleman had two sons,

William, who succeeded him;

Andrew Scott, Esq., who obtained from his father the lands and Barony of Glendoick, Co. Perth, with the express provision that, after his death, those lands should return to the family of Balweary. This Andrew lived temp. Queen Mary, and obtained the Barony of Kirkstyll, Co. Perth, which subsequently became the title of his family. The great-grandson of this Andrew,

J. John Scott, Esq. of Kirkstyll, obtaining a charter under the Great Seal, in 1679, of the lands and Barony of Ancrum, assumed that designation, and was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 27 Oct., 1671, with remainder to his heirs male generally. in the last reign, and the only one during that year. Though generally ascribed to Scott, the authorship of the Waverley Novels remained an inviolate secret, until the failure of the publishers, Messrs. Constable and Co., in 1836. By this unfortunate event, Sir Walter Scott's affairs were brought to the verge of ruin, but he met the calamity with inflexible courage and honour. "Gentlemen," said he to his creditors, "time and I, against any two: let me take this good ally into company, and I believe I shall be able to pay you every farthing." This, had he lived, he would have done, for during the last years of his life, the revenue of his intellect may be fixed at £10,000 a year. In the winter of 1830, his health first declined, and in the autumn of the ensuing year, he was at the confines, but finding his strength rapidly decay, he returned, and died in Scotland, 21 Sept., 1832, leaving behind him a name which already receives honor in every civilized nation of the globe, and which will go down to posterity, coupled with those of Shakespeare, Milton, Burns, and Byron. SETON.

SETON, Sir Henry John, Bart., of Abercorn, Co. Limithgow.

Lineage.

This very ancient and eminent family deduces its descent from dougal de Seton, who lived in the reign of King BORGH, son of MALCOLM III., and was father of sir dougal de Seton, who is found a witness in the charters of King DAVID I., and from whom lineally descended sir christopher seton, one of the great Scottish Barons who supported Robert the Bruce, and at the battle of Methven, in 1306, had the honor of being of the party which rescued that monarch from the hands of the English. Soon afterwards, however, Sir Christopher had the misfortune to be taken prisoner himself, in the castle of Lockdown, and with his brother, John, and other Scottish patriots, was ordered to be put to death by King Edward. This gallant supporter of his country's cause, m. Christian Bruce, sister of King Robert, and was S. by his own son, sir alexander seton, who was restored by his uncle, King Robert Bruce, to all the lands possessed by his progenitors in Scotland, and obtained several other important grants and privileges from the same monarch. Sir Alexander was Governor of Berwick- upon-Tweed, and heading an army to oppose Edward Halot, who landed in Fifeshire, he fell in the conflict, near Kinghorn, in 1329, and was S. by his eldest son, sir alexander seton, in his estates and the Government of Berwick. This gallant person has been justly celebrated for his defence of the town of Berwick against King Edward III., and the whole English army. The English monarch having called upon the garrison to surrender,threatened, in case of refusal, to put the governor's two sons, then in his hands as hostages, to death: but nothing could induce Sir Alexander to give up the town, so long as he had the power of defending it: and the King is accused of having put his menace into execution, by causing William seton, his younger son, to be hung upon a gibbet, within view of their gallant father. Berwick subsequently fell, after the battle of Haldon Hill, in 1333, Sir Alexander m. in 1337, and was S. by his son, sir alexander seton, of Seton, who was S. by his son, sir alexander seton. This gentleman m. Catharine, dau. of Sir William Sinclair, of Herdmans town, by whom he had two sons,

Sir John, afterwards Lord Seton, progenitor of the Earls of Winton; and Sir Alexander seton, who m. Elizabeth, and sole heiress of Sir Adam Gordon, by which marriage he obtained the estates of Gordon, Huntly, &c. This Sir Alexander, who was created one of the ambassadors to the court of England, to negotiate for King James's liberty, had been created by that monarch a Lord of Parliament. He was S. at his decease by his eldest son, alexander seton, Lord Gordon. This nobleman m. thrice: 1st, Jean, dau. of Robert, Lord Keith, by whom he had no issue; 2ndly, Egilda, dau. and sole heiress of John Hay, Esq. of Tillybody, by whom he acquired the lands of Touch, and other great estates; and had two sons, Alexander. He m. 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Crichton, Lord Chancellor of Scotland, by whom he had several children. His Lordship was created Earl of Huntly in 1445, and by a subsequent patent, in 1491, he had the succession altered from heirs male generally to the heirs male of his third marriage; in consequence of which, his eldest son by that marriage, George Seton, S. at his decease, to whom the Earldom of Huntly was granted, his eldest son, by his second marriage, Sir alexander seton, inherited the lands of Touch, Tillybody, &c. This Sir Alexander being a person of great influence, was appointed hereditary armour-bearer a.s. &c. This Sir Alexander being a person of great influence, was appointed hereditary armour-bearer and squire of the body to King James III. He m. Eliza- beth, dau. of Thomas, 2nd Earl of Mar, and was S. by his only son, sir alexander seton, of Touch, from whom lineally descended,

i. sir william seton, who obtained a charter under the great seal in 1662, of the lands and barony of Abercorn, Co. Limithgow, and was created a Baronet of Nova Scotia in 1663, with remainder to his heirs male whatsoever. Sir William m. Christian, dau. of George Dunbar, of Dunbar, and was S. by his eldest son, ii. sir walter, an advocate before the Court of Session, and Commissary Clerk of Edinburgh. This gentleman m. Euphym, dau. of Sir Robert Murray, of Priestfield, and was S. by his eldest son, SE'TON, Sir William Coote, Bart., of Pitmedden, Co. Aberdeen, b. 19 Dec., 1808, m. 26 Nov., 1834, Eliza-Henrietta, 2nd dau. of the late Henry Lumedden, Esq., and relict of Captain Wilson, of the Hon. E.L.C. service, and has issue. Sir William x. to the title, as 7th Baronet, upon the decease of his grandfathers, in 1819.

Ancestry.

From a curious MS. entitled "The Genealogy and History of the illustrious House and Surname of Seton, collected and set forth by Sir Richard Mainland, of Lethington, a sister's son of the said house," (father of the famous secretary so memorable in the days of the unhappy Mary, and ancestor of the noble house of Landerdale), we extract the following particulars regarding the origin of this family:—"There were few surnames in Scotland (says Sir Richard) before the time of King Malcolm Carnmore, except that after the manner yet used in the Highlands, they used their father's names subjoined to their own, in form of a patronymic. The said King Malcolm gave to his nobles and gentlemen particular surnames: some by reason of their offices, and some after the names of the lands which they possessed, and some for other causes. Amongst whom the predecessor of this family got the name of Seton, as the Chronicles testify, by occasion of the possession of the lands of that name, which was given to the lands by reason that the town thereof is situated hard upon the sea.

I cannot find the proper name of him who first received the surname; the first whose proper name I find, is called Dougal Seton; he was son, or else nephew, to him, who first received this surname, and lived in the time of King Alexander I."

From this Dougal, the Mainland manuscript traces the line to CHRISTIAN SETON (and then continues), "who in the days of William Wallace, was made Knt., by King Robert Bruce, and styled (for his many valiant acts against the Englishmen) Good Christian Seton. At the Said of Methven, King Robert Bruce being taken captive, his taken crying in derision, who will help the new made King? the said Christian rescued the King, and beat down them who had him in bands. He m. the sister of the said King Robert, who gave him the double treasure about his coat of arms, in like manner it is borne by the King himself. At length he was taken and carried to London, where he was most cruelly put to death; which, when King Robert heard, as he was walking upon a little hill beside the town of Dumfries, after much sorrow and regret for the worthy death of so noble a Knight, in the same place where he was walking, founded a chapel in honor of the Virgin Mary; and, in remembrance of the said Sir Christian, founded a priest to do service therein perpetually, and to pray for the said Sir Christian, mortifying five pounds yearly out of the barony of Fasillarock, for extenuation of the said priest. The chapel was commonly called Christhill's chapel, and was standing undecayed in 1552."

From this gallant and unfortunate Knight, we pass to

WILLIAM SETON, who was created a Lord of Parliament. This nobleman (we are informed) bought the marriage of the lady, heretrix of Gordon and Sira-bogue, intending to bestow her on his eldest son, John; but he being in affection of a daughter of the Earl of March, did marry her without his father's knowledge; whereof the said Lord William bestowed her on his second son.

ALEXANDER SETON, of whom are descended the Earls of Huntly, and the Setons, of Meldrum, of Touch, and Tillybodie; for she bore to him two sons; the eldest, Alexander, was 1st Earl of Huntly, having adopted the name of Gordon; and the second, WILLIAM SETON, m. Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of William de Meldrum, by whom he got that barony and several other estates. From this William linearly descended

WILLIAM SETON, of Meldrum, who s. in 1533, and m. 1st, Janet, dau. of James Gordon, Esq. of Lesmoir, by whom he had three sons; and, 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Innes, of Leuchars, by whom he had George, Chancellor of Aberdeen, and JAMES SETON, who having acquired the lands of Pitmedden, in Aberdeenshire, adapted that designation.

1. Sir Alexander Seton, Knt., of Pitmedden, having obtained great eminence as a lawyer, was appointed one of the Senators of the College of Justice and a Lord of Justiciary, in 1677. He was also styled the Knight of the Shire for Aberdeen, and created a Baronet of Nova Scotia, 15 Jan. 1681. After the Revolution, he was offered the station of Lord of Session, by King William, but declined the office, deeming it inconsistent with the oaths he had already taken: he retired, therefore, into a private life. Ancestry.

This family deduces its descent from a period antecedent to the Conquest; but the first person of note upon record is

RICHARD DE TALBOT, who is mentioned in Domesday Book, as holding nine hides of land from Walter Giffard, Earl of Buckingham. This Richard m. the dau. of Gerard de Gourmay, by whom he had two sons, Geoffrey, progenitor of the Talbots, of Thornhill and Bussall, in Yorkshire.

And

HUGH DE TALBOT, ancestor of the house of Shrewsbury, who was made Governor of the Castle of Plessey, in Essex, by his uncle, Hugh de Gourmay, in 1118, then in rebellion against Henry I, after he had caused the king's governor to be put to death. Hugh de Talbot, subsequently, assumed the habit of a monk, and retired into the monastery of Beaulach, in Normandy, leaving three sons, Richard, William, and Hugh, by his wife, Beatrix, dau. of William de Duneville. The eldest son, RICHARD DE TALBOT, obtained from King HENRY II, a grant of the lordship of Eccleshall and Lutton, Co. Hereford, which grant King Richard I confirmed for two hundred marks. This Richard de Talbot m. a dau. of Stephen Bulmer, of Applecreek, Co. York, and was s. by his eldest son, tion of King Richard I.; in the 5th of whose reign he had lands given to him in Linton, for the custody of the Castle of Ludlow. In 1199, this Gilbert paid a fine of forty shillings, that he might not go beyond sea, and that he might have the seigneury of his own demesnes. He was s. by his son,

And an elder son,

Gilbert de Talbot, his successor, who was made Governor of the Castles of Grosmond, Skerriith, and Blanminister, by King H. His, and constituted Justice Itinerant for the County of Hereford, by the same monarch. He m. Gwendeline, dau. of Rheose ap Griffith, Prince of South Wales, and relinquished in consequence his paternal arms, viz. bendy of ten pieces, or, and a lion rampant, or, in a field gules, with a bordure engrailed of the first, the armorial ensigns of the princes of Wales, which his descendants have ever since borne. He d. in 1274, and s. by his son,

Richard de Talbot, feudal Baron of Ercleswall, Sheriff of Gloucester in the 26th of Edward I., who m. Sarah, dau. of William Beauchamp, Baron of Elmley, and Earl of Warwick, and dying in 1366, was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Gisbert Talbot, who, being involved, with Thomas Plantagenet, Earl of Lancaster, in the murder of Piers de Gaveston. Earl of Cornwall, had his pardon for the same. This Sir Gilbert, who was Lord Chamberlain to the King in the 2nd Ewuan III., had summons to Parliament as a Baron in 1321, and dying in 1346, was s. by his son, (by Anne his wife, dau. of William, Lord Boteler, of Wem),

Sir Richard Talbot, 2nd Baron, summoned to Parliament from 1341 to 1345. This nobleman was an eminent warrior in the reign of Edward III., and was made a Knight Banneret. He d. in 1356, possessed of immense estates, (amongst which was Goderich Castle, Co. Hereford, where he chiefly resided,) and was s. by his only son, Gilbert, 3rd Baron, summoned to Parliament from 1362 to 1366. This nobleman m. 1st, Patrouel, dau. of James Bottiller, Earl of Ormonde, by whom he had an only son; and, 2ndly, Joan, dau. of Ralph, Earl of Stafford, and was created Earl, by his second marriage.

Sir Richard, 4th Baron, who, having m. Annart, sister, and eventually sole heiress, of John, Baron Strange, of Blackmere, was summoned to Parliament (A D. 1387,) in the lifetime of his father, as "Ricardo Talbot de Blackmere," and "Ricard Talbot de Gode ricke Castell." This nobleman d. in 1396, leaving five sons and four daughters, of whom,

Richard, the 3rd son, was Archbishop of Dublin for thirty two years; during which period, he was sar eed by E. Chancellor, Lord Justice, and Lord Deputy of Ireland.

Lord Talbot was s. by his eldest son,

Sir Gisbert, 5th Baron, who m. 1st, Joan, 2nd dau. of Thomas, (of Woodstock,) Duke of Gloucester, youngest son of King Ewuan III., by whom he had no issue; and, 2ndly, Beatrice, illegitimate dau. of John I., King of Portugal, and widow of Thomas, Earl of Arundel, by whom he left at his decease, in 1419, a daughter, his successor,

Angeart Talbot, at whose decease, in minority, 13 Deo Jure, the original Baron of Talbot, and that of Talbot, of Blackmere, devolved upon her Ladyship's uncle,

Sir John Talbot, 6th Baron, who, having m. Maud, eldest dau. and co-heir of Thomas Nevil, Lord Pur nival, had been summoned to Parliament, in 1499, as 1st Baron Talbot of Parnhayll." His Lordship was appointed, in 1413, Lord Justice of Ireland, and, in two years afterwards, Lord Lieutenant of the same Kingdom, in which important government he continued for seven years. He subsequently distinguished himself in the year the earl of the same name was killed, but his son, the fifth Earl of Shrewsbury, whose peerage was conferred upon the same field, in the reign of Henry VI., under the Regent, John Placentyn, Duke of Bedford, when his name alone became terrible, in consequence of the various successful expeditions he had conducted. His Lordship was attacked, however, by the Maid of Orleans, at Patay, in 1429, and his army being entirely routed, he became captive to the enterprising and enthusiastic hermit. He was exchanged soon after for Ambrose de Lorain, a celebrated French captain, and continuing to distinguish himself in arms, he was created, 29 May, 1419, Earl of Shrewsbury. His Lordship was, subsequently, reconstituted Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and elevated to the Peerage of that Kingdom 17 July, 1425, by the begetting of his son, the 2nd Earl of Shrewsbury, Richard, who was a celebrated and invincible general, in foreign warfare, advanced to the relief of Chastillon, and giving the besieging French army battle, 13 July, 1425, in the height of his age, received a wound in the thigh, which proved immediately mortal. His Lordship was said to have been victorious in forty different battles and dangerous skirmishes. The Earl had two surviving sons by his first wife,

John, his successor,

Lewis (Sir), of Penyward, Herts.

Joan, m. to James, 1st Lord Berkeley.

His Lordship was s. by his son,

John (Sir), Earl, K.C., Lord Treasurer of Ireland during the administration of his father, and, subsequently, Lord Treasurer of England. His Lordship fell at the battle of Northampton, 10 July, 1460, fighting under the red rose. The Earl m. 1st, Catherine, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Edward Burnell, but had no issue. He espoused, 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of James Butler, Earl of Ormond and Wiltshire, and left, (with other issue),

John, his successor,

John, 3rd Earl of Shrewsbury, having been appointed at the same time Lord High Steward of Ireland. This celebrated general, being again engaged in foreign warfare, advanced to the relief of Chastillon, and giving the besieging French army battle, 13 July, 1425, in the height of his age, received a wound in the thigh, which proved immediately mortal. His Lordship was said to have been victorious in forty different battles and dangerous skirmishes. The Earl had two surviving sons by his first wife, relic of Thomas Barton, Esq., and of Sir Richard Cardlor, Lord Mayor of London, by whom he left, at his decease, in 1518, an only son,

John Talbot, of Albrighton, Co. Salop, who eventually inherited the manor of Grafton, and dying in 1549, was z. by his son,

John (Sir), whose son,

John (Sir), m. Catherine, dau. of Sir William Peere, Knt., Secretary of State to Queen Mary, and left at his decease, Grosor, of whom hereafter, as 9th Earl of Shrewsbury,

John, 2nd Earl of Shrewsbury, was z. by his eldest son,

John, 3rd Earl, who m. Catherine, dau. of Humphrey Stafford, Duke of Buckingham; and, dying in 1473, was z. by his eldest son, Grosor, whose son was installed a Knight of the Garter in 1484, for his valiant conduct at the battle of Stoste, 16 June, 1487. His Lordship m. 1st, Anne, dau. of William, Lord Hastings, by whom he had six sons and five daughters. He espoused, 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. to Sir William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke; and to Sir William, in Kent, by whom he had one surviving dau. Aune, m. 1st, to Peter Compton, son and heir of Sir William Compton, Knt.; and, 2ndly, to William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke. Lord Shrewsbury d. 30 July, 1538, and was z. by his second and eldest surviving son.

Francis, 5th Earl, K.G., who had been summoned to Parliament as a Baron in the lifetime of his father, (Feb. 1532-3). This nobleman," says Lodge, although of no ordinary abilities, appears to have been considered almost entirely to a military life. The bravery, prudence, and fidelity, which had distinguished him in his important public situations during the reign of Queen Mary, induced Elizabeth to retain him amongst those few servants of the late reign, whom she admitted to her Privy Council when she mounted the throne; but his steady adherence to the religion of his ancestors probably obstructed his further promotion. Of the whole body of the temporal peers who had so faithfully and so manfully, subscribed to the recognition of the temporal authority (of the Papal see), only this nobleman, and one more (Viscount Montague), could now be found to oppose the revocation of that concession. He survived this momentous act of sincerity but a few months, and dying 25 Sept. 1566, was z. by his only son (by his first wife, Mary, dau. of Thomas, Lord Dacre, of Gilsland), Grosor, 6th Earl, K.C. This nobleman had the custody of Mary, Queen of Scots, committed to his charge, to the 11th of Elizabeth, and was appointed, 16 Jan., 1551-2, at the arraignment of the Duke of Norfolk, Lord High Steward of England; and, after the execution of that nobleman, Earl Marshal. His Lordship m. 1st, Gertrude, dau. of Thomas Manners, Earl of Rutland, by whom he had four sons and three daughters; and, 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. and co-heiress of John Hardwick, of Hardwick, by whom he had no issue. Of this Lady, Lodge says," she had been already thrice married; to Robert Barley, Esq., of Barley, Co. Derby; to Sir William Alderley; and to Sir William St. Loo, Captain of the Guard to Queen Elizabeth. She prevailed upon the first of these gentlemen, who died without issue, to settle his estate on her and her heirs, who were abundantly produced from her second marriage. Her third husband, who was very rich, was led, by her persuasions, to make a similar disposition of his fortune, to the utter prejudice of his daughters by a former wife; and now, unsated with the wealth and caves of three husbands, she finished her conquests by marrying the Earl of Shrewsbury, the richest and most powerful Peer of his time. To sum up her character, she was a woman of a masculine line understanding and conduct; proud, furious, selfish, and unfeeling. She was a builder, a buyer and seller of estates, a money-lender, a farmer, and a merchant o' lead, coals, and timber. She lived to a great old age, and d. in 1606, immensely rich." The Earl of Shrewsbury was z. in 1550, by his eldest surviving son,

Gilbert, 7th Earl, K.G., who m. Mary, dau. of his step-mother, by Sir William Cavendish, and left three daughters, viz.,

Mary, m. to William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke, and d. s. p.

Elizabeth, m. to Henry Grey, Earl of Kent.

Upon these Ladies the greater part of the Earl's estates devolved, and the Barones of Talbot, Parravul, and Strange, of Blackmere, fell into abeyance, until the decease of the two elder without issue, when those dignities are presumed to have vested in Althea, the third daughter (see Brak's extinct and dormant peerage). The Earldom passed to the deceased Lord's brother, Edward, 8th Earl; at whose decease, without surviving issue, 8 February, 1617, the Earldom reverted to his kinsman, Grosor Talbot, Esq., of Grafton, as 9th Earl (refer to descendants of Sir Gilbert Talbot*, of Grafton, of James, 2nd Earl). His Lordship dying, however, unmarried, the Peerage devolved upon his nephew,

John, 10th Earl (son of John Talbot, Esq. by Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Sir Thomas Buckherville, Knt., of Brinsop, in Herefordshire (see Burke's coomtners, vol. i. p. 89, for an account of the ancient family of Basseville). His Lordship m. Mary, daughter of Sir Francis Fortescue, K.B., of Salden Hill, and, with other issues,

Francis, his successor,

Gilbert, m. Jane, dau. of Flatehury, Esq., and left

Grosor, as 13th and 14th Earl of Shrewsbury.

Grosor, 11th Earl, was z. in 1653, by his eldest surviving son,

Francis, 11th Earl, this nobleman m. 1st, Anna, dau. and co-heiress of Sir John Cosyer, of Stockburne, by whom he had an only surviving son, Mary, m. to John Stonor, Esq., of Wotton Park, Co. Oxford. His Lordship m. 2ndly, Anna Maria, dau. of Robert, 2nd Earl of Cardigan, by whom he had two sons; and dying 16 Mar, 1667, of a wound received in a duel with George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham, was z. by his eldest son,

Charles, the 12th Earl, b. in 1660, who was created 30th April, 1694, Marquis of Alton, Co. Stafford, and Duke of Shrewsbury, and installed a Knight of the Garter. His Grace was a prominent statesman in the reigns of William and Mary, Queen Anna, and Grosor I., and filled some of the highest official situations. He d. 1 Feb. 1717, and leaving no issue, the Dukedom and Marquises expired, but the Earldom, ac. reverted to his cousin,

The REV. GILBERT TALBOT, as 13th Earl, a clergyman of the Catholic church. (Refer to Gilbert, son of 10th Earl). This nobleman dying in 1743, the honors devolved upon his brother, Grosor Talbot, Esq., as 14th Earl, who m. 11 March, 1719, Mary, dau. of Thomas, Viscount Fitzwilliam, of the kingdom of Ireland (by Elizabeth, sister to George Pitt, of Strathfielday, Co. Hants), by whom (who died 28 Sept, 1732), he had issue,

2. Charles, m. 1st, Mary, dau. and co-heiress of Robert Alwyn, Esq., of Traysford, Co. Essex, by whom (who d. s. p. in 1755), he had one dau., who d. 12 July, 1771; and, 2ndly, Mary, dau. of Sir George Mustyn, of棠e, Bart., by whom he had,

RICHARD S U C K B U R G H , Esq., Knight of the Shire for Warwick, in 1641. Tradition states, that, as King Charles 1. marched to Edgclt, in Oct., 1643, he observed this gentleman hunting in his fields, and ordering him to be called, gave him so gracious a reception, that Mr. Shuckburgh went immediately home, armed all his tenantry, and the next day attended his Majesty to the field where he was knighted. Sir Richard was present at the battle of Edge Hill, and afterwards, retiring to his seat, fortified himself on the top of Shuckburgh Hill, where he fell, apparently dead, after a gallant resistance, surrounded by most of his tenants; but, being taken up with symptoms of life, he was carried away a prisoner, first to Northampton, and subsequently to Kenilworth, from whence he eventually purchased his freedom at a very high price. "A more exalted character than that of Sir Henry Sidney," observes Dr. Zouch, "is scarcely to be found in the volume of history. It deserves to be better known. In him we behold the brave soldier, the con demmate general, the able counsellor, the wise legislator, while in the recesses of private life he was no less estimable as a husband, a father, and a friend; firmly attached to the church of England, and adorning his Christian profession by his temperance and exemplary piety. He was father of the all-accom plished Sir Philip Sidney, whom Camden describes as "the great glory of his family, the great hope of man card, the most lively pattern of virtue, and the glory of the world." Lineage.

The Baronetcy of Slingsby, of Slingsby, represents the two ancient families of Slingsby and Scriven, and several others of antiquity equal to their own, which are merged in them.

GARL DE SCRIVEN, surnamed Acanus, had a confirmation of his lands in Scriven from Henry I., and was the first of his house who enjoyed the feudal honor of Capital, or Chief Forestor, of the Forest and Parks of Knaresborough. He had issue,

Baldwin de Scriven, whose son,

Henry de Scriven, m. temp. Henry III, Emma, sister and heir of Henry de Markington, and by her had issue, Baldwin, who d. s. p. and Thomas de Scriven, heir to his brother, who m. temp. Edward I., Agnes, dau. of John de Walkinham, and heir of her brother, "Alanus de Walkingham, Chauallier." and by her had issue,

Henry de Scriven, who m. temp. Edward II., Alice, dau. and co-heiress of Richard de Caperton, of Scolton, and by her had issue, two daughters, co-heirs, of whom the younger, Agnes, m. 1st, William de Newton; 2ndly, Richard Furneux, from whom she was divorced, and 3rdly, William de Merkesale. The elder,

JOHANNA DE SCRIVEN, carried the marriage of Scriven with several others, and also the dignity of Capital Forestor, of the Forest and Parks of Knaresborough into the house of Slingsby, by intermarrying in 1327 with William de Slingsby, of Studley, which WILLIAM DE SLINGSBY, of Studley, in whose issue the families of Slingsby and Scriven were thus united, was son of John de Slingsby (great grandson of William de Selingshie, of Slingsby, in the North Riding of Yorkshire) by his wife, Agnes, dau. of William de Slingsby (Studley, and heir to his brother William. He d. 13 Edward III, 1350-56, having by his said wife, Johanna, had a daughter, the wife of Robert de Winlesby, by whom she had issue, and two sons, Gilbert, who m. Margaret, dau. of Henry Querton, and d. 18 Edward III.

RICHARD DE SLINGSBY, heir of his brother Gilbert, Capital Forestor in the right of his mother, who bore Scriven in the first quarter, quarterly with Slingsby, as has been the custom of most of the family since, though not insensibly.

He m. Johanna, dau. and co-heir of William Neasfeld, of Scolton, and d. 21 Edward III, having by her had issue,

WILLIAM DE SLINGSBY, who m. Margaret, dau. of Thomas Winlesby, and d. 12 Richard II., 1312, and had by her s. by his son, John, who both d. s. p.

Peter, m. and had issue, one dau., Anne, m. 1st to William Goldeborough, 2ndly to Henry Brakendin.

Peter, who had issue, Christopher, Robert,

Peter, (whence Peter was father of Anthony Slingsby, created a Baronet of England by letters patent, bearing date 23 Oct., 1628, which date has been usually given for the Nova Scotia creation. Sir Anthony was Governor of Zuphen in the Low Countries, and d. 1639, when the baronetcy became extinct. Kinber's conjecture as to the limitation of this patent to Sir Henry, the 1st Nova Scotia Baronet, is wrong, for no mention is made in Sir Henry's patent of his being above the rank of a Gentleman, nor is it to be supposed he would have had a second patent of Baronetcy, as he had been already a Baronet.) and four daughters, Anne, m. to John Swyley of Sutrelk, Marjory, m. to Walter Pulllyn, of Scolton, Isabel, m. to Thomas Lambert of Harrogate, and Elizabeth, Sir Michael, as 3rd Baronet, at the decease of his father, the late Hon. Sir William Cusack-Smith, 2nd Baron of the Court of Exchequer in Ireland, 21 May, 1836.

SMI

Lineage.

This family, which is a branch of a Yorkshire house, of the same name, and of knightly degree, was founded in Ireland by a Colonel Smith, in the 17th century, who, according to domestic tradition, had two sons killed in action fighting by his side. From this Colonel Smith descended three brothers, viz.

Michael Smith, Esq., who possessed considerable estates in County of Coolhow and Kildare, and acquired others by intermarriage with Miss Wilkinson, an heiress: which estates descended to his eldest son, Captain William-Wilkinson Smith, of the 1st Dragon Guards; but this great property has since passed from the family of Smith into other hands.

Joseph Smith, Esq., of Pickforthstown, Co. Kildare, the second brother, left two daughters only; the elder of whom, Sarah, m. Daniel Graham, Esq., of Coolquille, Co. Tipperary; and the younger, Elizabeth, m. Matthew Rathurst, Esq., of Nicholstown, Co. Kildare.

William Smith, Esq., of Newtown, King's Co. (3rd brother), m. Hester Lynch, of the Calway tribe of Lynch, by whom he had one son, Michael, and a dau., Elizabeth, who m. 1st, Michael Donovan, Esq., Co. Cork; and, 2ndly, Shawe Cardall, of Ballykillin, King's Co. Mr. Smith d. in 1747, and the following monumental lines, written by his son, were inscribed to his memory:

"For ever doubly sacred be the earth
That round thy dear remains, gave me my birth;
No rude disturbance may it ever know,
Nor near it let one bitter thistle grow,
But may the sweetest flowers that deck the ground
In lovely wildness ever bloom around!
And when, at length, life's trilling drama o'er,
He, now who wrote and weeps so be no more,
O be his spirit, with his father's blest!
While, mrieved here, their kindred ashes rest!"

By which son,

1. Michael Smith, Esq., he was succeeded. This gentleman was b. 7 Sept., 1740; and having made a very distinguished figure in the college of Dublin, where he entered as a pensioner, at an early age, was called to the Irish bar in 1769, and having, shortly after, taken the degree of LL.D., was admitted an advocate, and practised in the Ecclesiastical Courts. In 1783, Mr. Smith was returned to the Irish Parliament, and continued a member until 1793, when he was elevated to the bench as one of the Barons of the Exchequer. (He died in 1794, deceased, the Recordership of Dublin.) In 1790, 28 Aug., Mr. Baron Smith was created a Baronet of Ireland; and, in 1801, his Lordship was transferred to the Rolls bench, and sworn of the Privy Council in Ireland. From this high judicial situation Sir Michael retired in 1806, when he received a very elegant and well-merited address from the Irish bar.

Sir Michael Smith m. 1st, Mary Anne, dau. of James Cusack, Esq., of Coolmines, Co. Dublin, and of Ballyryan, Co. Wicklow: descended lineally from Sir Thomas Cusack, Knt., Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and one of the Lords Justices in the reigns of Henry VIII. and Edward VI.; which Sir Thomas sprang originally from Sir Lucas Cusack, or da Cusacco, who, in the reign of Henry II., was Lord of Killeen, Drayton; but the title of Gerrartstown became extinct. To the dignity of Knt., he added a barony in fee from James Cusack, Esq., of Coolmines, grandfather of the present Baronet, conceived himself, and was considered by his family, to have a claim. Sir Michael Smith had issue by his marriage,

William, his successor, who, in 1784, was entered as a gentleman commoner, at Christ Church, Oxford, where he took a bachelor's degree. He was afterwards called to the Irish bar; and having, subsequently, taken the degree of LL.D., he was admitted an advocate in the Spiritual Court. In 1813, he obtained the rank of King's Counsel, and was returned, in the same year, to the Irish Parliament, of which he continued a member so long as he continued an independent legislature. In 1806 he was appointed Solicitor General for Ireland; and, in the following year, an occurrence took place, which, for its singularity, attracted attention—that of the Solicitor General accompanying his father, Mr. Baron Smith, upon the same circuit, as second judge. In Jan., 1807, Mr. Solicitor General succeeded to the vacant place in the Court of Exchequer, upon the promotion of Sir Michael Smith to the Rolls bench.

Angelica, m. 1st, to Smith Steele, Esq., 2nd son of Sir Richard Steele, Bart.; and, 2ndly, to William Borrowes, Esq., son of Sir Kildare Borrowes, Bart., but d. in 1808, without issue.

Sir William, who, as above stated, was 2nd Baron of the Court of Exchequer in Ireland, was b. 23 Jan., 1783; m. 1 Aug., 1787, Hester, eldest dau. of Thomas Berry, Esq., of Eglish Castle, King's Co., and had issue,

Sir Henry Westenbury, K.B., of Nettlestede, in Suffolk, by whom he had six sons and four daughters, of whom he lived, Sir Edward, K.B., from whom claim to be deceased the Seymour, of Castleton, in the Queen's Co., now represented by Abigail Crassley Seymour, Esq. of Castleto (see Burn's Commons, vol. III. p. 201). Thomas, created Lord Seymour, of Sudley, who m. Queen Catharina (Parr), widow of King Henry VIII, and was constituted Lord Admiral of England, 30 Dec., 1546-7, but, as he was attainted, his honors, of course, became forfeited, but his eldest son, by the 2nd marriage, Edward Seymour, was created, by Queen Elizabeth, in the 1st year of her reign, Baron of Sudeley, and Earl of Hertford. His Jership m. Lady Catherine Grey, dau. and heiress of Henry, Duke of Suffolk (and granddaughter, maternally, of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, by Mary, Queen Dowager of France, and sister of King Henry VIII.). This lady, who was sister of the amiable, interesting, and unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, was herself not less unhappy. Upon her pregnancy being discovered, in 1563, she was committed prisoner to the Tower, as well as the Earl, her husband, but he was demy on for nine years, and fined by the star-chamber, £16,000, for having vitiated a maid of the royal blood. The unhappy Countess died in confinement in 1567, after giving birth to two sons, viz.

1. Edward, who d. young.
2. Edward, Lord Beauchamp, who, to the 6th of James I. (notwithstanding the Duke of Somerset's descendants by his 1st wife, had lodged a petition against the claims of those of the second to the family honors), obtained letters patent that himself and the heirs male of his body immediately should be assumed to have been the eldest son, and his father, should be Baron of Parliament, and have place and voice therein; as also other letters patent, the same year, for the enjoyment of the title of Earl of Hertford. He m. Honora, dau. of Sir Richard Rogers, Knt., of Bristanton, Co. Dorset, and d. before his father. He had issue, Edward (Sir), K.B., who m. Anne, dau. of Richard Sackville, Earl of Dorset, and d. in 1618, before his father and grandfather, without surviving issue.

William (Sir), who m. his granddaughter, Francis (Sir), who was created Baron Seymour, of Troubridge, 10 Feb., 1641. This nobleman, m. 1st, Francis, dau. and co-heir of Sir Gilbert Prime, Knt., of Allington, Co. Wilts, by whom he had issue.

Sir Charles, his successor.

Francis, m. to Sir William Dacre, Knt, of Warkworth, Northumberland.

His Lordship espoused, 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Sir Robert Lee, of Billesley, but had no other issue.

He d. 12 July, 1604, and was succeeded by his son, Charles, and Lord Troubridge, who m. 1st, Mary, dau. and sole heir of Thomas Smith, Esq., of Solley, Co. Wilts, and had a son and two daughters, of whom Frances, the eldest, m. Sir George Haagerford, Knt., of Cadebacham, Wilts. His Lordship espoused, 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Allington, (who was m. 2ndly, to Sir John Emlo Knt., of Whetnham, Chancellor of the Exchequer, temp. Charles I. and James II.), and had surviving issue, Francis, 3rdly, sucessively Dukes of Somerset, Charles, 6th, and Honora, m. to Sir Charles Gerard, Bart.

The validity of the marriage (between the Earl and Lady Catherine Grey), was, however, subsequently tried and established at common law. His Lordship espoused, two and two, widows, namely, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Howard, of Effingham; and Frances, dau. of Thomas, Viscount Howard, of Binyon, and widow of Henry Parnell, Esq., of London; but had no other issue. His Lordship lived to an advanced age, and dying in 1621, was a. by his grandson, of his ambition, and grasping the sceptre of unlimited authority, which he swayed during the first two years of his nephew's minority, with all the attributes of royalty, and with all its exterior symbols, he was hurled from his invidious pre/emminence by the arm of one of his most confidential councillors, Edward Grey (Earl of Warwick), Duke of Northumberland, and brought to the block, 22 Jan., 1552, generally lamented by the people. (For a more detailed account of this eminent person, refer to Burn's Extinct and Dormant Peerage.) His Grace, being attainted, his honors, of course, became forfeited, but his eldest son, by the 2nd marriage, Edward Seymour, was created, by Queen Elizabeth, in the 1st year of her reign, Baron of Sudeley, and Earl of Hertford. His Jership m. Lady Catherine Grey, dau. and heiress of Henry, Duke of Suffolk (and granddaughter, maternally, of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, by Mary, Queen Dowager of France, and sister of King Henry VIII.). This lady, who was sister of the amiable, interesting, and unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, was herself not less unhappy. Anne, dau. of Richard Sackville, Earl of Dorset, and d. in 1618, before his father and grandfather, without surviving issue.

William (Sir), who m. his granddaughter, Francis (Sir), who was created Baron Seymour, of Troubridge, 10 Feb., 1641. This nobleman, m. 1st, Francis, dau. and co-heir of Sir Gilbert Prime, Knt., of Allington, Co. Wilts, by whom he had issue.

Charles, his successor.

Francis, m. to Sir William Dacre, Knt, of Warkworth, Northumberland.

His Lordship espoused, 2ndly, Catherine, dau. of Sir Robert Lee, of Billesley, but had no other issue.

He d. 12 July, 1604, and was succeeded by his son, Charles, and Lord Troubridge, who m. 1st, Mary, dau. and sole heir of Thomas Smith, Esq., of Solley, Co. Wilts, and had a son and two daughters, of whom Frances, the eldest, m. Sir George Haagerford, Knt., of Cadebacham, Wilts. His Lordship espoused, 2ndly, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Allington, (who was m. 2ndly, to Sir John Emlo Knt., of Whetnham, Chancellor of the Exchequer, temp. The validity of the marriage (between the Earl and Lady Catherine Grey), was, however, subsequently tried and established at common law. His Lordship espoused, two and two, widows, namely, Elizabeth, dau. of William, Lord Howard, of Effingham; and Frances, dau. of Thomas, Viscount Howard, of Binyon, and widow of Henry Parnell, Esq., of London; but had no other issue. His Lordship lived to an advanced age, and dying in 1621, was a. by his grandson, Sir William Seymour, as Earl of Hertford and Baron Beauchamp, who was created 3 June, 1646, Marquis of Hertford. During the reign of James I., this nobleman attempted, without having gained the consent of the House of Lords, to marry Lady Arabella Stuart, first cousin to the King, and was, in consequence, obliged to fly the kingdom, while the unfortunate lady was committed prisoner to the Tower, where she spent her unhappy life, 27 Sept., 1615. His Lovelace, subsequently returning, and taking a most distinguished and gallant part in favor of royalty, during the civil wars, was restored to the Baron of Seymour, of Huché, and Dukedom or Somerset, by the reversal of the attainder of his eminent ancestor, 13 Sept., 1660. His Grace m. 2ndly (if his connexion with Lady Arabella be deemed a marriage), Lady Frances Devereux, eldest da. of the accomplished and ill-fated Earl of Essex, by whom he had (with three duns).

Henry, Lord Beauchamp, who predeceased the Duke, Elizabeth, m. to Thomas Bruce, Earl of Aylesbury.

John, who s. 3rd Duke.

The Duke d. within little more than a month after his restoration to the honors of his great-grandfather, 24 Oct., 1660, and was s. by his grandson, William, 3rd Duke; at whose demise, unmannered, in 1671, the estates of Tottenham Park and Savernake Forest, Co. Wilts, with other considerable lands and property, devolved upon his sister, the Countess of Aylesbury; while the Peerage reverted to his uncle, Lord John Seymour, as 4th Duke, who m. Sarah, dau. and heir of Sir Edward Aiston, Knt., M.D., President of the College of Physicians, and widow of George Griswine, Esq. Delaval, but d. without issue in 1705, when the Marquess of Hertford expired, but the other honors devolved upon his cousin, Francis Seymour, 3rd Baron Seymour, of Trentham, as 5th Duke (refer to Edward, Lord Beauchamp, son of Edward, 1st Earl of Hertford). This nobleman, during his travels in Italy, having, in company with some French gentlemen, visited the church of the Augustinians, at Lerré, and there offered a dea-lness to ladies of the family of Botti, of that place, was shot to death by Horatio Botti, the husband of one of those ladies, at the door of his inn, in April, 1678. His Grace dying unm., the Dukedom, &c. devolved upon his brother,

The town 6th Duke, K.G., commonly called "the proud Duke of Somerset." His Grace m. 1st, Lady Elizabeth Percy, only dau. of Jocelyn, Earl of Northumberlaid, and sole heiress of the Percy (her Ladyship had been m. twice previously; 1st, to Lord Ogle; and 2ndly, to Thomas Thiynne, Esq., but had no issue), by whom he had issue.

Algernon, his successor.

Percy, M.P. for Cockermouth, d. unm. 1721. Charles, d. unm. to 1710. Elizabeth, m. to Henry, Earl of Thondom, and d. m. into Catherine, m. to Sir William Wyndham, Bart., of Orchard Wyndham, and dying in 1718, left Charles, who s. his uncle, the Duke of Somerset, to the Earlom of Egregram, &c., Thomas, who m. Isabel, d., of Edward Ooole, Esq., of Catesby.

Anne, m. to Peregrine, 3rd Duke of Leeds, and d. in 1722.

The Duke espoused, 2ndly, Lady Charlotte Finch, dau. of Daniel, Earl of Winchelsea, by whom he had issue Frances, m. to John, Marquis of Granby. Charlotte, m. Henrage, Earl of Aylesford.

This nobleman, so well known as the proud Duke of Somerset, is thus described by Granger: "The Grace was of a middle stature, finely formed, and of dark complexion, he loved music and poetry, had judgment, but an hesitation in speech made him appear wanting in expression. He was noble in sentiments, magni- cent in living, a generous enemy, and a firm friend. His foible was an unbounded pride, which carried him to the lengths of a lunatic, and his malice of the realm, being a Roman Catholic, he took precedence on all great occasions. He had attended the funeral of Charles II., Queen Mary, and William III., and at the coronation of James II., William and Mary, Anne, George I., and George II. He seemed little less in his conduct than if vested with regal brows. His servants obeyed by signs. The country roads were cleared that he might pass without obstruction or observation. He had two wives, the 1st was Eliza, sole dau. and heir of Jocelyn, the virgin widow of Henry Cavendish, Earl of Ogle, the reformer of Thomas Thiynne, Esq., who was shot in his coach by Count Comingsmarq, in hopes of obtaining the heiress of the Percy. His 2nd Duchess was Charlotte, 2nd dau. of Daniel, Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham. He made a vast distinction between a Percy and a Finch. The Duchess once familiarly tapped him on the shoulder with her fan, he turned round, and with an indignant sour countenance, said, my first Duchess was a Percy, and she would have done him such a liberty. His children obeyed his mandates with profound respect; the two youngest daughters had used to stand alternately whilst he slept of an afternoon. Lady Charlotte being tired, one day, the Duke waked, and dis assembled, declared he would make his room less to her want of decent. By his will he left her £20,000 less than her sister. The pleasant Sir James Delevi laid a wager of £1,000 that he would make the Duke give him precedence; but that was judged impossible, for his Grace was all eyes and ears upon the Duke while Lady Delevi was in the room, and up at least one day obtained information of the precise time when the Duke was to pass a narrow part of the road on his way to town, stationed himself there, in a coach, en b versus the day with the arms, and surrounded by many servants, in the livery of the head of the house of Howard, who called out when Somerset appeared, "The Duke of Norfolk." The former, fearful of committing a breach of etiquette, hurried his postilier under a hedge, whereas he was no sooner safely fixed, when Delaval passed, who, leaning out of the carriage, bowed with a familiar air, and wished his Grace a good morn- ing. He indignantly exclaimed, "Is't you, Sir James? I thought it had been the Duke of Norfolk." The Duke was perfectly merry, was won, and was made merry with the stratagem to gain his Grace. His Grace d. in 1748, at the advanced age of eighty-seven, having filled high offices in the courts of Charles II., William III., and Queen Anne, and was s. by his only surviving son.

Lord Stafford inherited, as 7th Baronet, at the demise of his father, 11th Aug., 1609, and succeeded to the ancient Barony of Stafford, after the reversal of the iniquitous attinder of Sir William Howard, Viscount Stafford, in 1624: the House of Lords resolving, 6 July, 1625, that "Sir George Jermyngham had made out his claim to the title, dignity, and honor of Baron Stafford, under certain letters patent, bearing date 12 Sept., in the 16th year of the reign of King Charles I." His Lordship assumed, by sign manual, in 1626, the additional surname and arms of Stafford.

Unearc.

The paternal line of the present house of Stafford is stated to have been originally Danish, and the name "Jernegan." Weever, in his work on "AncientFuneral Monuments," has these observations:"—"This name hath been of exempliarie note, before the Conquest; if you will believe this much that followed, taken out of the pedigree of the Dukes of Jermyngham, by judicious gentleman anno MXXX. Cannte, King of Denmark, and of England, after his return from Rome, brought divers captains and soldiers from Denmark, whereby the greatest part were christened here, in England, and begun to settle themselves here; of whom Jernegan or Jermyngham, and Jerninghoe, now Jennings, were of the most esteeme with Cannte, who gave unto the said Jermyngham certain manors in Norfolk; and to Jennings, certain manors lying upon the sea-side, near Harwich, in Suffolke, in regard of their former services done to his father, Sweuna, King of Denmark." Bloomfield's History of Norfolk commences the pedigree of the Jermynghams with Jernegan, or Jerningham, who was settled at Horham, Jernyngham, Co. Suffolk, in the reigns of King Stephen and King Henry II.; and in 1192, was s. by his son.

Sir Henry also obtained grants from the Queen of several large manors in Norfolk, Suffolk, Herefordshire, and Gloucestershire; particularly those of Costessey, in Norfolk, and Wingfield Castle, in Suffolk. The former he made the chief place of his family, having rebuilt it; and it has so continued down to the present time. Sir Henry entertained Queen Elizabeth there, in her progress to Norfolk; but his attachment to the ancient faith seems to have been a bar to any favour at court during that Queen's reign. He m. JOHN WILLIAM HENRY, who m. as 7th (and present) Earl of Stair.

The part which this nobleman (John, 2nd Viscount Stair,) had in the horrible massacre of Glencoe cannot be passed over in silence. "King William," says Hume, "was in the course of that time the agent for the destruction of those unhappy people, (the clan of MacDonald of Glencoe,) and an order for this barbarous execution, signed and counter-signed by his Majesty's own hand, being transmitted to the Master of Stair, Secretary for Scotland, this minister sent particular directions to Livingstone, who commanded the troops in that kingdom, to put the inhabitants of Glencoe to the sword, charging him to take no prisoners, that the scene might be more terrible." (Hume, vol. 4th.) His Lordship was obliged to resign the Secretaryship in 1695, parliament having voted that his letters exceeded the King's instructions, and declared the affair of Glencoe a barbarous murder. He d. suddenly, 8 Jan., 1707, and was s. by his eldest son,

JOHN, 2nd Earl, K. T. a military officer of high rank and renown, and a participator in the victories of the Duka of Marlborough. His Lordship served as Brigadier at the battle of Oudenarde in 1708, and was beaer of the despatches announcing that victory to England. He subsequently attained the rank of Field-Marshal, and was appointed Commander-in-Chief in North Britain. In 1715, Lord Stair went to France in a diplomatic capacity, and after the death of Louis XIV., was constituted Ambassador Extraordinary to that court. The object of his embassy was of the utmost importance, in his manner of executing it the most brilliant and spirited. The former was to discover and watch over the intrigues of the Jacobites, when the Brunswick family could hardly be said to have a firm establishment on the throne, and to cement a friendship with the Raison, Duke of Orleans, whose steadiness could not always be depended upon. No ambassador ever exceeded, and few have equalled, the splendid and magnificent table, equipage, and train of domestics, by which the Earl's embassy was distinguished. His Lordship m. Eleanor, widow of James, Viscount Primrose, and dau. of James, 2nd Earl of Loudoun, but had no issue. In consequence of the marriage of his next brother, and heir presumptive, with a pecess, the Earl surrendered, in 1701, all the honours and estates, and obtained a new charter, retaining, in default of male issue, a reversionary clause in favor of any one of the male descendants of the 1st Viscount, whom his Lordship should name; in conformity with which his Lordship executed a deed, immediately prior to his decease, in 1707, by his nephew, John, the son of his 2nd brother, George, his successor. But that nomination was contested by the Hon. James Dalrymple, 2nd son of the Hon. William Dalrymple and the Countess of Dumfries; and the lords deciding in his favor 2 May, 1747, he succeeded as

JAMES 3rd Earl; but, dying without issue, in 1766, the honours reverted to his elder brother,

WILLIAM, as 4th Earl, who had inherited the Earldom of Dumfries, at the decease of his mother, Penelope, Countess of Dumfries. This nobleman dying, however, in 1768, with issue, the Earldom of Dumfries passed into the right line, and the honours of the house of Stair reverted to his cousin, JOHN, 5th Earl, the personage who had already been defeated under his uncle's nomination, but had then succeeded to his uncle's fortune, without dispute (Refer to George, of Dalmahoy, youngest son of 1st Earl.) Lineage.

This is one of the most ancient and illustrious families in the Peerage. It deduces an uninterrupted line from the Conquest, and has allied with the Plantage-nets and Tudors.

Henry de Grey, obtained from King Richard I,

the Manor of Twycross, and had the same confirmed by King John, with the privilege of hunting

the fox and hare, in any lands belonging to the crown, except the King’s own demesnes. In the reign of Henry III, he had a grant of the Manor of Grimston,

Co. Nottingham, from Robert Bardolph, whose niece and co-heiress. Isolda, he married, and, eventually, shared in the inheritance of all the said Robert’s lands.

From his 2nd son, by this lady,

John de Grey, descended the extinct Earls and Dukes of Kesteven, and the extinct Dukes of Suffolk, the Earls of Wilton, and the house of which we are now treating.

This John de Grey was Justice of Chester, temp.

Henry III., and d. in the fiftieth year of that reign,

leaving a son and heir,

Reginald de Grey, who was Justice of Chester in the reign of Edward I., and obtained from that monarch the castle of Rutland, and other territorial possessions. He m. Mand, dau. and heiress of Henry de

Longchamp, a powerful feudal baron, whose principal residence was Wilton Castle, Co. Hereford, and dying in the 1st year of Edward II., left a son and heir,

John de Grey; of whose sons,

Henry de Grey, the eldest, was s. by his eldest son,

Reginald, Lord Grey of Wilton, which digally explored under the attainder of Thomas, Lord Grey of Wilton, who d. 6 July, 1614, in the Tower of London, where he had been imprisoned for participating in Raleigh’s Plot. His Ladyship’s sister and heir, Bridget, m. Sir Rowland Egerton, Bart, the direct mater-

Robert de Grey, the youngest son, obtained from his father the castle of Rutland, with other extensive possessions; and marrying Elizabeth, dau. of John, Lord

Hastings, by Isabel, dau. and co-heiress of William

Vaunce, Earl of Pembroke, left a son,

Reginald, whose son,

Reginald, Lord Grey de Rutland, upon the demise of his sister’s husband, Earl of Pembroke, was found to be that nobleman’s next heir. From the eldest son of this Reginald, Lord Grey, Sir

John Grey (who predeceased him,) descended the Earl of Kent, (the third successor to which honor having impaired his fortune by gaming, this son and heir, Sir Henry Grey, of West, declined assuming the dignity, but that gentleman's grandson and heir, Reginald, having, by a subsequent recovery of his fortune, became 6th Earl, which Earldom merged in the Duke- dom of Kent, in 1710, and expired in 1740. (See Burke's Extinct Peerage.)

The second son of Reginald, Lord de Grey Ruthyn, Sir Edward Grey, m. Elizabeth, da. and heiress of Henry, son and heir apparent of William, Lord Ferrers, of Groby, and in consequence, assumed that title. His Lordship d. in the 36th year of Henry VI., and was z. by his eldest son.

Sir John Grey's eldest son and heir.

Sir Thomas Grey, through the influence of his mother, was created, in the 11th year of Edward IV., Earl of Ragby, and in four years afterwards, advanced to the Marquessate of Dorset. After King Edward's death, however, his Lordship was attainted of high treason, but restored upon the elevation of Henry VII. to the throne. His d. 16 April, 1461, and was z. by his eldest surviving son (by his 2nd wife, Cicely, dau. and heiress of William Bonville, Lord Bonville and Harrington),

The issue of this marriage were two daughters: the eldest, the amiable and unfortunate Lady Jane Grey, having, for a few days enjoyed the empty trappings of royalty, was brought, with her husband, Lord Guilford Dudley, to the block, 22 Feb., 1554-5. Lady Catherine, 2nd dau. and dauphine of Edward Seymour, Earl of Hertford, without the permission of Queen Elizabeth, was committed to the Tower, by her Majesty, where she died 26 Jan., 1567; while the 3rd, Lady Mary Grey, m. The unhappy father suffered soon after his eldest dau., 22 Feb., 1554-5, and his brother, Thomas, 27 April, following. From that period the honor of the family were eclipsed, until revived by King James I., who created

(The latter was one of the Judges upon the trial of the unfortunate Charles, and his signature appears to the warrant for execution.) The Earl d. in 1673, and was z. by his grandson, Thomas, 2nd Earl. This nobleman was imprisoned for the part he had taken in Monmouth's rebellion, but was admitted to bail, and he finally secured his safety, under the amnesty granted 10 March, 1685.

Lineage.

The family of Stapleton, which derived its surname from a town in the county of York, is no less famous for the gallant warriors it produced in different eras, than by the dignities and honors conferred upon them by the sovereigns under whose rule they had the good fortune to flourish. Amongst even the Knights of the Garter,* upon the institution of that noble order, we find a person of the name and family.

They subsequently transplanted themselves into Ireland, and enjoyed a considerable estate in Tipperary, until the reign of CHARLES I., when John Ed- mund Stapleton, Esq. of Thoresbeeg, being completely ruined by his adhesion to the royal cause, the family sought new fortune, in the different foreign lands of Europe. Some went into Spain, where they attained high military rank; others into France, and there also, adopting the soldier's profession, became eminent in arms. Of the latter, a branch acquired a large estate at Dervallers, near Nantes in Bretagne, and bore the title of Counts of Tréves.

2. James STEUART, a posthumous child, b. in 1668. This gentleman was bred to the business of a Merchant and Banker at Edinburgh, and was eminently successful, through the interest of his uncle, Lord Carmichael. He was elected Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and, soon afterwards, received the honor of knighthood. Sir James purchased, about the year 1644, the lands of Westburns, or Kirkfield; and, subsequently, the barony of Coltness. In 1650, he was elected Lord Provost of Edinburgh; and a second time in 1655; but he was dismissed at the Restoration, as a covenanter, being at the same time committed to Edinburgh Castle, and fined £200; but he obtained his release, and a remission of the penalty, through the influence of Sir Archibald Primrose, Lord Regent. He was again, however, sent to prison, where he remained for some years, and was liberated, eventually, through the same interest. Sir James lost his first lady in 1656, and m. 2ndly, in 1668, Marion, widow of Sir John Elliot, of Fytton, and dau. of David McCulloch, Esq. of Goodtrees, Co. Sir James attained the reputation of being one of the most able, ingenious, and acute lawyers of his time; and his "Answer to Dirlinn's Doubts" fully establishes that character. STE early distinguished himself by the most splendid abilities and a knowledge of his profession, which probably would have raised him to the highest offices of the state, had he not unfortunately been concerned, although not in a public manner, in the rising of 1743. Information of his mode of living, lodged against him, and he retired with his family into France. During his residence abroad, he wrote, in French, a defence of Sir Isaac Newton's chronology; and also composed his great and well known work, "The Political Economy." In 1772, by the death of Sir Archibald Stewart Denham, the Barony of Coltness, (which had been conferred, in 1698, upon Sir Thomas Stewart, the first of Coltness), was united in the person of Sir James, with that of Goodtrees. Lineage.

The genealogists of Scotland commence their account of this family in the eighth century, and they state that its chiefs were Thanes of Locharbay for seven descents, until Rancho, one of those thanes, was assassinated by the usurper, Macherth, to evade a prediction, "That his race should succeed to the Scottish throne."

Sir Alexander Stuart, descended from a younger son of one of the Lord-High Stewards, obtained from Charles VI. of France an additional coat armour, viz., Argent, the lion of Scotland, debruised with a ragged staff, or. The son of this Sir Alexander, Sir John Stuart, was in the train of James, of Scotland, when that prince landed on the English coast, in his voyage from France, in 1406, and was detained in England. It was subsequently knighted, for his performances in a tournament held in Smithfield, in the 10th year of Henry IV. and was the first of his name and family who settled in England. Lineage.

This is a branch of the house of Howard, Dukes of Norfolk, sprung from Thomas the 4th Duke, and his 2nd wife, Margaret, only dau. and heiress of Thomas Lord Audley, of Walden, K.G., through their only son,

Lord Thomas Howard, the heir of his mother's estate, and a distinguished naval officer in the reign of Queen Elizabeth. His Lordship was restored in blood, (his father, the Duke, having been attainted and beheaded in 1575,) by act of Parliament, in the 27th year of her majesty; and in twelve years after, when the two former summoned to Parliament, as Lord Howard of Walden. His Lordship was created Earl of Suffield 21 July, 1603, and installed a knight of the Garter. The plate of the Earl's installation, which remains yet in the chapel of St. George, at Windsor, in the ninth stall, commemorates him as "Thomas, Earl of Suffold, Baron of Walden, and Grand Treasourer of England;" but he was not appointed to the latter high and important office until the 11th of July, 1614. The plate must, therefore, have been set up some years after the coronation; and, through his Lordship's vigilance, the subsequent discovery of the gunpowder treason, the detection of the conspirators, and the preservation of the King and Parliament, are mainly attributable. His Lordship was elected Chancellor of the University of Cambridge in 1613, and constituted Lord High Treasurer of England in the following year; of which high office he was deprived in 1618, after an investigation of the conduct of himself, his Countess, and Sir John Bingley, Treasurer's Rememberer, the two former were fined £30,000, and committed to the Tower, during pleasure; and Bingley £2000, and sent to the Fleet. The Earl was, however, in public opinion, generally deemed guiltless; but the County had incurred much odium, by extorting money from all persons who had any matters to dispatch at the Treasury. His Lordship m. 1st, Mary, sister and co-heiress of Thomas Lord Dacre, of Gilsland, but had no issue. He espoused, 2ndly, Catherine, the lady who incurred the censure of the Star Chamber, and co-heiress of Sir Henry Kuevet, Knt. of Chariton, Co. Wilts, and widow of the Hon. Richard Howard, F.S.A.) Sir Augustus D'Easte, under the advice of Doctor Lashington, the Civilian, and Mr. Richards, the Chancery Barrister, has filed a bill in chancery to perpetuate the evidence of the clergyman, a Minister of the Church of England, now in advanced years, by whom his illegitimate parents were married at Rome, in order that he may avail himself of the same at any time, should it be requisite, in the establishment of his legitimacy. The following is the nature of the bill: after stating the fact of the marriage at Rome, certain circumstances respecting the land property of which his mother was seized in her lifetime; also the creation of his royal father, as Duke of Sussex, Earl of Inverness, and Baron of Arklow, with remainder to the heir male of his body lawfully begotten—"that the clergyman, by whom the marriage ceremony was performed at Rome, is now upwards of eighty year old—it submits that Sir Augustus D'Easte is entitled to examine witnesses to prove the said marriage, and that it was good, and valid; and to perpetuate the testimony of such witnesses, both as to the said marriage and the other matters and things aforesaid, in such manner as shall be deemed by the said clergyman, at his discretion, at any time hereafter, and to perpetuate such testimony in such manner as shall be deemed advisable; that the said document be opened and read, and made use of the same, as he may be advised." His Grace was summoned to parliament in the lifetime of his father, as Baron Gower (the late Duke's Heiress). He is Lord Lieutenant of the county of Sutherland.

Lineage.

All our antiquaries coincide in attaching a long and distinguished line of ancestors to this family, and in giving it an Anglo-Saxon origin; but they differ as to the identity of its founder; some tracing that honor to Sir Allan Gower, Lord of Sittenham, in Yorkshire, and High Sheriff of the County at the time of the Conquest; while others name William Fitz Gower, of Sittenham, who was charged with a mark for his lands, in the Sheriff's accounts, anno 1167. In more than a hundred years afterwards (towards the close of the thirteenth century), we find

SIR JOHN GOWER one of the persons of note summoned to be at Carlisle, with horse and arms, on the feast of the nativity of St. John the Baptist, to march against the Scots; and again in the following year, the same personage is summoned, for a like purpose, to proceed to Berwick. After Sir John comes

LAWRENCE GOWER, who obtained the king's pardon, in the 7th Edward II., for having been concerned with the Earl of Lancaster, in the murder of Pier teveyton, at Blacklow Hill, 19 June, 1322. This lawrence was 2. by

SIR NICHOLAS GOWER, who was returned one of the Knights of the Shire, Co. York, in the 12th Edward III., to a great council summoned by Edward, the Black Prince, at Bury St. Edmunds, on the realm, and held at Hanampton : for which service, being in attendance fourteen days, he received the sum of £3. 12s. 0d. In the 2th of the same monarch, we find Sir Nicholas obtaining the King's permission to go to Rome, with six valets and seven horses, in his retinue: and in 1301, he was commissioned to investigate some outrage committed upon Hugh, Archbishop of Damascus, at Newstead, near Boland. From Sir Nicholas we pass to his grand-sire.

SIR JOHN GOWER, who was standard bearer to Prince Edward, son of King Henry VI., and having been made prisoner at the battle of Tewkesbury, 4 May, 1471, was there beheaded. This gallant but unfortunate soldier had married Elizabeth, dau. of Edward Goldsbrough, one of the Barons of the Exchequer in the reign of Henry VII., and left, with other children, his successor, SIR EDWARD GOWER, who m. Margery, dau. of Sir

the Duke of Somerset, in 1547, and master of the ordinance in the expedition against the same kingdom,

Lilleshal, Co. Salop, by whom he had two sons and a daughter. He was 2. by (the son of his eldest son, Edward Gower, by Dorothy, dau. of Thomas Wentworth,

This Peerage, according to the traditional details of some of the Scottish writers, is the most ancient in North Britain, and gives way to few, if any, in all Europe beside. Those writers state, that in the reign of Curno H. 11., A.D. 76, a colony, called Catti, coming from Germany into Scotland, separated into two divisions; one of which establishing themselves in the north, called their new quarters Caithness; while that which went southward, denominated the country Sutherland.

ALAN, Thane of Sutherland, who gave a very signal defeat to the Danes, and was murdered by Macbeth, for his fidelity to Malcolm Canmore, was father of WILLIAM, who, according to tradition, was created Earl of Sutherland by King Malcolm, and was s. by his son.

ROBERT, who built Dunrobin Castle, which still continues the principal seat of the family. This Robert was s. by his son.

Hugh, who was s. in 1204, by his eldest son, WILLIAM, under the title of "Williamus Dominus de Soutelandia." From an indenture dated in 1225, it appears that there was a William, Earl of Sutherland, between the years 1222 and 1233, and it has been conjectured that ALEXANDER II. created this William Baron Strathmarn, and Earl of Sutherland, for assisting to crush the rebellion of Gillespo, the North, in 1228. This nobleman d. in 1248, and was s. by his son.

WILLIAM, 2nd Earl, who was one of the Scottish nobles attending the parliament of Alexander III. at Scome, in 1294-5, when the succession to the throne was settled. He swore fealty to Edward I., in 1296, signified himself, although advanced in years, at the battle of Bannockburn, on the side of Bruce, in 1314, and subscribed the letter to the Pope, asserting the independence of Scotland, at Aberbrothwick, 6 April, 1320. His Lordship d. in 1325, after enjoying the dignity for seventy-seven years, and was s. by his son.

WILLIAM, 5th Earl, who m. s. by his eldest son,

ROBERT, 6th Earl. This nobleman m. Lady Maflia Dunbar, dau. of John, Earl of Moray, and dying in 1412, was s. by his eldest son.

John, 7th Earl, who m. Margaret, dau. of Sir William Baillie, of Lamlington, and was s. at his decease in 1469, by his son.

John, 8th Earl. This nobleman m. Lady Margaret Macdonald, eldest dau. of Alexander, Earl of Ross, by whom he had,

John, his successor,

Elizabeth, who s. as Countess of Sutherland.

His Lordship d. in 1506, and was s. by his son,

John, 9th Earl; at whose decease, without issue, in 1514, the honors devolved upon his only sister,

Elizabeth, as Countess of Sutherland. Her Ladyship had previously espoused Adam Gordon, of Aboyne, second son of George, Earl of Huntly, who assumed, in consequence, the title of Earl of Sutherland. The Countess, upon a resignation, obtained a new charter from King James V. (1 Dec., 1527), of the Earldom (after the death of his husband) in favor of Alexander, her son, and his heirs. Her Ladyship d. in 1535, and the Earl in 1537, when the honors devolved upon their grandson,

John, 10th Earl (eldest son of Alexander, Master of Sutherland, by Lady Janet Stewart, eldest dau. of John, 2nd Earl of Atholl). His Lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, only dau. of Colin, 3rd Earl of Argyll, and relit of James, Earl of Moray, but by her had no issue: he espoused, 2ndly, Lady Helen Stewart, dau. of John, 3rd Earl of Argyll, by whom he had a son and two daus.; and, 3rdly, Marian, eldest dau. of George, 4th Earl of Seton, relit of John, 4th Earl of Menteth, who perished with the Earl by poison in July, 1567, when his Lordship's only son,

Elizabeth, m. 7 June, 1898, to John William Bowden, Esq., eldest son of John Bowden, Esq. of Groserene-place.

Lineage.

This very ancient family derives its surname from Swinburne Castle, in Northumberland, which it possessed from so remote a period, that (although Sir William Dugdale notes them not as such,) the Swinburnes of Swinburne Castle, have been esteemed feudal lords.

Sir Arm of Swinburne, representative of the family temp. Edward II., left a son, Adam de Swinborne, of Swinborne, who d. s. p., and three daughters, namely,

Christian, m. to John de Widdrington, and thus Swiburne Castle, the ancient seat of the Swinburnes, passed to the Widdringtons, from whom it was portected in 1603 by Thomas Riddell, Esq. of Featham, and is now the property of that gentleman's descendant, the present Thomas Riddell, Esq. of Feltom

Park and Swinburne Castle. (See Burman's Commoneers, vol. iii. p. 267.)

Barbara, m. to John de Strivelyn, of Buillie Castle,

in Northumberland.

Elizabeth, m. to Walter Heron, of Haddiston.

The family immediately before us, which springs from a common progenitor with the Swinburnes of Swinburne Castle, and has preserved a male succession, derives directly from

Sir William de Swinborne, living temp. Henry III., who obtained by grant from Gilbert de Umfravile, Earl of Angus, the lordship of Cheilerton, in Northumberland. He was lineal ancestor of Lord Taffe is a Count of the Holy Roman Empire, and Chamberlain to the Emperor of Austria.

Lineage.

The members of this noble family have resided, for a series of years, in the Austrian dominions, and have filled the highest offices, civil and military, under the imperial government, doubtless from having heretofore, as Catholics, been debarred the prouder gratification of serving their own. The Taaffes are of great antiquity in the counties of Louth and Sligo, and have produced, in ancient times, many distinguished and eminent persons; amongst whom was Sir Richard Taffe, who flourished temp. King Edward 1 and d. in 1287; contemporary with Sir Richard was the Lord NICHOLAS Taffe, who died in 1286, leaving two sons: John Taffe, Archbishop of Armagh, who d. in 1349, and college-kanimies.

RICHARD FIZZ NICHOLAS-TAFFE; whose eldest son, RICHARD Taffe, Esq. was seated at Ballybragan and Castleumpagh. This gentleman served the office of Sheriff for the Co. Louth in 1345, and to his custody was committed the person of Hugh de Lacie, the younger, Earl of Ulster, after his condemnation for high treason, in invading the Invasion of Ireland, by

--- She was first cousin to Arthur Wolfe, Viscount Wardena, Chief Justice of the King's Bench in Ireland.

Edward Bruce, until the execution of that unfortunate nobleman at Drogheda. From this Richard lineally descended

SIR WILLIAM TAFFE, Knt. of Harleston, who distinguished himself by his services to the crown, during Tyrone's rebellion in 1597; and subsequently, maintained his reputation against the Spanish force, which landed at Kinsale in 1601. Sir William d. in 1630, and was x. by his only son, (by his 2nd wife, Isuery, dau. of Sir Christopher Belasyse.)

THEOBALL, 2nd Viscount, who was advanced to the Earldom of Carringford 26 June, 1657. This nobleman espoused zealously the royal cause during the civil war, and had his estate sequestered by the Usurper. After the Restoration, he obtained, however, a pension of £2000 a year; and, upon being advanced in the Peerage, received a grant of £2000 a year, of the rents payable to the crown, out of the retrenched lands of adventurers and soldiers, during such time as the same remained in the common stock of repressions, and out of forfeited justiciures, mortages, &c. The Earl was r. at his decease by his eldest surviving son, by his 1st wife, Mary, dau. of Sir Nicholas White, of Lealiph.

NICHOLAS, 2nd Earl and 3rd Viscount. This nobleman fell at the battle of the Boyne, in the command of a regiment of foot, under the banner of King JAMES, and leaving no issue, the honors devolved upon his brother.

FRANCIS, 3rd Earl, the celebrated Count Taffe, of the Germanic Empire. This nobleman, who was sent in his youth to the city of Olmuts, to prosecute his studies, became, first, one of the pages of honor to the Emperor Ferdinand, and, soon after, obtained a capt-

tain's commission from CHARLES, the 5th Duke of Lor-rain, in his own regiment. He was, subsequently, Chamberlain to the Emperor, a Marshal of the Empire, and Counsellor of the State and Cabinet. His Lordship was so highly esteemed by most of the crowned heads of Europe, that, when he succeeded to his heritabutary honors, he was exempted from forfeiture, by a special clause in the English act of Parliament, 1st William and Mary; and in the act passed in Ireland, 9th of the same reign, to hinder the reversion of divers outlawries and attainders, it was provided, that nothing therein contained should extend to attain, or convict of high treason, Nicholas, Earl of Carringford, or his brother Francis, 4th Earl d. in Aug., 1703, and leaving no issue, the honors devolved upon his nephew.

TALBOT and MALAHIDE, Baron, (Richard-Wogan Talbot), of Malahide, Co. Dublin, in the Peerage of Ireland, hereditary Lord Admiral of Malahide and the seas adjoining; m. in Nov., 1782, Catherine, dau. and heiress of John Malpas, Esq., of Rochestown, Co. Dublin, by whom he had a son and daughter, via.

His Lordship m. 2ndly, Margaret, dau. of Andrew Sayers, Esq., but has no other issue. Lord Talbot is a Colonel in the Army, and represented the County of Dublin many years in Parliament. He inherited the honors of his family on the decease of his mother, 27 Sept., 1834.

Lineage.

The castle and lordship of Malahide, on the sea-coast, near Dublin, have been possessed by the family of Talbot, from a period contemporary with the first introduction of English government into Ireland; and, at this moment, they furnish an instance unusually rare of a baronial estate having continued for upwards of 650 years in the male heirs and name of him on whom it had been originally conferred, by Henry II. It is remarkable too that of the ancient seignioral estates in Ireland, whose lords were vested with the dignity of Parliamentary Barons, not one can be traced to have been held directly and immediately, or under the crown, but the lordship of Malahide. Howver, the peninsula so called, which so lately as the 16th century is admeasured at merely twenty-seven acres, was held certainly in capite by grant from the King of England, but the adjoining manors, which formed the strength and substance of the baronial estate, were held of subjects by rent, ault, and service, viz. Ratheny, Killster, &c., manors were held of the monks of Christchurch at a chiefry of 3d. 4d. yearly. Killarrock at a service paid for or under the family of De Taya of a pair of farred gloves. Dulvin, which has been time immemorial inhabited by the Ngent family exclusively, whether styliog them selves De Nogent, De Capella, or Fitz-John, was for a subinfeudation made to his kinsman by Hogh da Lacy, as an ancient copy of his charter for that purpose still extant falty evisces. Lixnow was held as a subinfeudation under the Lords of the Liberty of Desmond. Atthaway was feudatory to the Lords (and Lady-Dontgens occasionally) of the Lordship of Connaught for the time being as a manor. Siana, another of the ancient baronies, was held of the heirs of De Verdon as of their manor of Dukat, to whom the Lords Le Fleming yearly rendered rent and service. Of the other remaining dignitaries, viz. De Courcy, or Kingsale, Offaly, (the first title obtained by the ancestors of the Duke of Leinster in the country), Gormanstown, Killeen, and Dunsany, though they may have existed in Ireland long before the practice of creating peers by patent commenced, and in that supposition only are here named, yet they are of such recent or modern acquirement in the families which now possess them, that they are excluded from any consideration in the discussion of a fact solely relating to seignioral territories acquired in the reign of Henr II., and now possessed by the descendants of the blood and name of the original founders. In this respect Malahide seems to have been unique in Ireland, and its lords, pursuant to the nature of their original tenure and the terms of their royal charters, never rendered homage, suit, or service, to any but the Crown, nor acknowledged any superior but the King of England alone. Richard de Talbot, who is mentioned in Domesday Book, was the common ancestor of the Lords of Malahide, and of the Earls of Shrewsbury, and in consequence of the well known affinity of those two branches, the family in Ireland, by ancient custom and practice, were entitled to the house of Shrewsbury next heirs in remainder to their Irish estates.

Richard Talbot, "Chevalier," was Lord of Malahide in the reign of Henr II. and after that monarch conferred the dominion of Ireland on his son, Priory (subsequently King) John, Sir Richard obtained a confirmatory grant of the lordship, with such and such, Ton and Them, infantatha, and the judgment of Water, and of Iron, the Duel, the Pit, the Gallows, and all other the appendages of civil and criminal jurisdiction as possessed by the barony of that day, to hold to him and his heirs by rendering to the king the service of one archer with a horse and coat of mail for ever. Sir Richard had also confirmed to him the advowson of the church of Malahide, and in the year 1293, presented his brother Walter Talbot to that benefice, he died, leaving two sons, Reginald and Adam. The elder Reginald Talbot, being a minor at his father's decease, the wardship of the estates devolved to the crown, and during his minority, Walter, his uncle, having died, the church became vacant, whereupon Henry de Londres, Archbishop of Dublin, then acting as Justiciary or Chief Governor of Ireland, appointed a clerk to the benefice in right of the King, as is set forth in an ancient inquisition. Reginald soon after died without issue, and was succeeded by his brother and heir.

Adam Talbot, Lord of Malahide, whose descent is specifically set forth in some proceedings taken by the crown to protect the estates of the family against certain encroachments of the Archbishop of Dublin. His son and heir was

Richard Talbot, who is entered on the exchequer roll, of 1278, as Lord Richard Talbot, and who, by the name of Richard Fitz-Adam Talbot, Knt. granted to King Edward I. in the year 1266, all wardships, reliefs, marriages, escheats, &c., happening within his lordship of Malahide, and it further appeared, by the same deed, which is enrolled on the Autiquissimae Roll, of Ireland, that he settled Malahide on his son,

Sir Milo Talbot, who was succeeded by his son,

Sir Richard Talbot, who was commissioned, in 1316, to appear at the exchequer, with one horse caparisoned, to hear and perform what the judges there, by advice of the king's privy council, should order, as part of the service by which he held the family estates. On the Remembrancer's Roll of the 9th of Edwain II. he is entered as being abroad in the public service, or "in servitio dominii regis," and afterwards while at home was entrusted with high power by the crown. He was the associate in arms of Sir John Birmingham, who with several noblemen and gentlemen having defeated Bruce when he invaded Ireland, was created Earl of Louth, by Edward II. in 1319, with £20 yearly fee for himself, and rents of the county, and the creation, which vested in the seigniority of Louth in Sir John, was so resorted by the more ancient families of De Verdon, Gurnon, Savage, &c. that in the year 1239, the Earl and about one hundred and sixty noble men were summoned to deliver up the lands of Ballybranan. Historians have all agreed in noticing this event, and amongst the few names which they have left us of those who were killed, are those of the Earl, some of his kinsmen, and Talbot, Lord of Malahide. By his lady, Margaret (de Ashebourne), he was a son and heir,

Thomas Talbot, who at his father's death, being a minor, was taken into the crown's guardianship, sed Ang Edward, by patent, testified at Guildford, 7 July, 1292, made a grant of the wardship of all his estates during minority. On coming of age the king sent orders to the exchequer that those estates should be discharged of the royal services due when certain seignioral territories were entered, as he the heir was then a minor. By a patent, dated at Westminster, 20 May, 1292, the king granted that he Lord Thomas for life should be exempt from juries and assizes, and should not be made sherife, escheator, or other minister against his will; the impalement of his families at Ballibrygan. Histories have all agreed in noticing this event, and amongst the few names which they have left us of those who were killed, are those of the Earl, some of his kinsmen, and Talbot, Lord of Malahide. By his lady, Margaret (de Ashebourne), he was a son and heir,

Sir Richard Talbot, the elder son, was Sheriff of the Co. Dublin, and by his wife Cecilia (who afterwards married Robert Gallane, and had dower in Conaghlah) left issue a son,

Thomas Talbot, a minor at his father's death, who died, leaving a son and heir,

Christopher Talbot, whose guardianship and estates in the Counties of Doughty, and Meath, and Kildare, were granted to Sir Thomas Fleming, Baron of Slane, by patent, dated at Westminster, March 1, in the 1st year of King Henry IV. and in this patent it is provided that Lord Stanes should have his marriage "abuse...disparagizations," and that he should find him sufficient maintenance, and sustain the mansion houses, and woods, and all other burthens and services incumbent on the estates he should discharge, rendering an account devoted to the Exchequer of the surplus. Christopher died without issue, whereupon the lordship devolved on Thomas Talbot, son of Lord Thomas (who was summoned to the great councils and parliament in the reign of Edward III, as above mentioned). For him, as for Thomas, his lineal house of Talbot, mill and grist mill, with two-thirds of Malahide, was resided, Nov. 1430, but he died soon after, as it appears that on the Nov., 1432, the King granted to Thomas Cusack and others the custody of all estates in the several counties of Dublin, Meath, and Kildare, of which he had lately died seised, and which were now vested in the crown by the minority of his son and heir, Richard Talbot, Lord of Malahide, who m. the Lady Matilda Plunkett, dau. of Christopher, Baron of Killearn. Of this lady a word ensuit. There is among the ancient paintings in the castle at Malahide, a whole length, in which the horned cap of the 15th century is very conspicuous, and this painting, family tradition assures, was painted by his own hand and given him by Christopher, 1st Baron of Killearn, the widow of Hussey, Baron of Galtrim, and wife of Sir Richard Talbot. There is also in the ruined church attached to the castle, an altar-tomb, with a representation in bold relief of the Talbot arms; and beneath them at the base are charged with the arms of Plunkett, Cusack, and Talbot. Of this Lady Maod, the legend of the country pathetically tells us that she was maid, wife, and widow, in one day, her husband having been killed immediately after marriage; and it must be observed, as a proof of the accuracy of such traditions and family reputation, that on examining the public records, it is found that the Lady Matilda Plunkett was daughter of Lord Killearn, and was married to Thomas Hussey, Baron of Galtrim, who was murdered as already mentioned, and that she obtained a patent wherein the King recognizes her as wife of Sir Richard Talbot, and granted her possession of her late husband's (Thomas, Baron of Galtrim) estates in the county of Meath. Her ladyship survived the death of Sir Richard, married John Cornewall, who was Chief Baron in the reign of Henry VI, on the Wednesday after the feast of the blessed Virgin Mary, 1441, and enjoyed in her husband's lower out of the lordships of Galtrim and of Malahide, in right of her two former lords. There are numerous other records as to this lady, in the Exchequer, where it can be traced that she died on the 17 July, in the year 1492, having survived her 3rd husband several years. Sir Richard Talbot, by Lady Maod, left a son and heir, Thomas Talbot, who on the 15 Nov., in the year 1499, had a patent of privileges conferred on him by the crown, as "Thomas Talbot Armiger Dominus de Malahide," and in the evidence chamber are several deeds, whereby the Lordships of Louth, Aske, Castlefrank, &c., were conveyed to him by Sir James Strange-ways, Knt., Richard Strangeways, his son and heir, John Conyers, Knt.; Margery, his wife; and John Conyers, the son as the Hon. Meath Plunkett, dau. of Darcy, of Knaith; and the latter of whom was ancestor to the Earls of Holderness. On the 15 Nov., 1469, the King granted him a patent, as "Thomas Talbot Armiger Dominus de Malahide," exempting him from attendance at assizes, and on the 21 Sept., 1475, he had license as Lord of Malahide to absent himself out of Ireland for three years. Soon after this, his Majesty King Edward IV., by a patent now under the great seal, and still preserved amongst the family deeds at the castle, 8 May, 1476, granted him all the customes of merchandises coming to the port of Malahide, and that he and his heirs should be Admirals of that port, with power of holding Courts of Admiralty, and appointing officers, gaugers, searches, water bailiffs, &c., and further, that he should have respite of his homage due to the crown for that manor for fifty years; that he should not be obliged to take the customary farm, or in any other manner to exercise the knighthood; that he should for ever have outlandish and free warren within the manor; that neither he nor his tenants should be compelled to attend the county courts; but should have view of frank pledge by his sequestrals and law day, with the return and execution of all writs; that none of his heirs should serve the office of coroner or escheator; that he and his heirs should hold their court, and hear and determine all pleas to any amount by his sequestrals or other officers, with power to arrest, attach, &c., within said lordship to hold a court baron, with all amercements, ransoms for escapes of felons, fugitives, or murderers, with license of absence for him and his heirs out of Ireland, and many other valuable privileges. In the 10th of Edward IV., when required in the Exchequer to do homage for his lordship of Malahide and other estates, he pleaded his exemption by the above patent, and was accordingly exonerated from homage, and to be and his successors thereafter to have the several other duties and restrictions pertinency to the same grant. He d. 23 July, 1467, when all his estates in the counties of Dublin, Meath, Louth, and Kildare, were taken into the King's hands. By a settlement which was executed 11 Sept., previous to his death, his estates were conveyed to him by trustees as "Dominus de Malahide," and to Elizabeth, his wife, for life, and remainders were created therein, for John, Richard, and Thomas, his younger sons. By said Lady Elizabeth, who survived him, he left as his sons and heirs: Sir Peter Talbot, who did homage in the Exchequer for the family lordships, and is stiled "Dominus de Malahide" in the records of that court. He m. the Lady Catherine Fitz Gerald, daughter of Gerald, Earl of Kildare; and, afterwards, Lady Elizabeth Preston, who d. 20 July, 1329; and having vested his estates in trustees, by his last will, 12 Sept., 1329, he desired to be buried in the church of Malahide, by Dame Jenett Eustace; and after leaving several considerable bequests for the repair and maintenance of the chancel, he devised all his lordships of Malahide, Garristown, Louth, and Castlebrig, to his son and heir, Thomas, and next to his sons, John and Walter, with remainder to his brother, John and William; all his other seisin, and several other duties and restrictions pertinency to the same grant. By inquisition, he was found to have died 10 July, 29th of Henry VIII., leaving, as his son and heir, Sir Thomas Talbot, who, on the 18 Dec., in the year 1539, had a grant of livery of all his father's estates in several counties in Ireland. Sir Thomas, 16 Oct., 1332, being sued in the Exchequer for not executing the office of sheriff of the county of Dublin, to which he had been elected and appointed, was called to the bar there and informed by the court that it was the pleasure of the Lord Deputy, Sir William Skeffington, that he should act as Sheriff, and was required to say whether he was willing to exercise that office. Sir Thomas, on the 12 July, 1332, plead the office; and the sum and substance of the suit was from his grandfather by King Edward IV., already mentioned, exonerating him and his heirs from such offices, and declared that he would not act as sheriff; whereupon the proceedings were discontinued. By Katherine, his wife, he had three sons; one of whom, Robert, was father of William Talbot, who acquired the estate of Carton, Co. Kildare, and who, being created a Baronet, 4 Feb., 1672, was grandfather of Colueil Talbot, who, by patent, dated 20 June, 1684, was created Baron of Talbot's town, Viscount of Ballyling.

and Earl of Tyrconnell, whose son, in tail male to his nephew, and was subsequently, on 20 March, 1689, advanced to the dignity of Marquess and Duke of Tyrconnell, by King James II, in whose service, as Chief Governor of Ireland, he died. The Duke, by Frances, Countess Hamilton, had two daughters, of whom one was M. M., the Princess of Vittmalm, and had issue two daughters; the one M. to M. Verne, and the other to the Prince Belomont; but both dying without issue, Richard Wogan Talbot, now Baron of Malahide, and heir presumptive to the Duke of Tyrconnell, as descendant and sole heir of Frances, the Duke's sister. In the castle there is a half-length painting, by Sir Peter Lely, and notwithstanding all that was written by his successful, yet unforgiving enemies at the revolution, to cast it in a genial degree, wit and virtue; and if to gits so brilliant and so Irish be joined devotion to his country, and fidelity to the unfortunate and fated family with whose exile he began life, and with whose ruin he finished it, it cannot be denied that in his character the element of evil were mixed with much great and striking good. Under happier circumstances the good might have predominated; and he, whose deeds are held even by his own family in such right estimation, might have deserved a notice on his race by those talents and heroism which gave force to his passions, and celebrity to his errors.

While King James was arming (for the Battle of the Boyne) in Sian Castle, another scene, equally striklog, was acted in the hall of Malahide. Before the daw of day, the Talbots, with their kinmen, to the number of 14, assembled, armed to the teeth, round a breakfast table, at which the sister of the King's Lieutenant-General (Tyrconnell), the Lady Frances, widow of the head of this loyal party (Richard Talbot, of Malahide, who d. 1700), presided. They set forth with a light to join their kinsman the Duke, the king's camp lying on the near shore of the Boyne, and found Tyrconnell, with the Duke of Berwick, reconnoitring the position of King William on the opposite side of the river. While William was mounting his horse, it happened that a man and two horses standing near him, were killed by a cannon ball. A second bullet rebounding, glanced over the right shoulder of the gallant William, and inflicted a fresh wound; his officers crowded round him, and it was thought by the enemy that he was killed. A shout of joy rose from the Irish camp; and Tyrconnell, prompt to avail himself of the great event, sent forth a squadron of cavalry to profy by the consternation. In this turbulent attack perished the party of the Talbots, one of whom to the castle to become the story of the eventful day. This one was a stripling youth, Richard, son, heir, and successor of the then Talbot of Malahide.

TEMPLE.

This ancient family derives its surname from the manor of Temple, Co. Leicester, and it deduces its descent from Leofric, Earl of Chester (erroneously styled Earl of Leicester), who lived in the reign of Edward the Confessor. This Leofric married the celebrated Godiva, of Coventry notoriety, who is said to have appeared the wrath of her offended lord, and to have obtained a restitution of privileges for the good citizens of Coventry, by exhibiting on horseback in the simple habitments of Eve, to the confusion of an un-lucky knight of the needle, whom tradition hath stricken blind for presuming to peep. Certain it is, that pictures of the earl and his countess were set up in the south window of Trinity church, in that ancient city, about the reign of Richard II., more than three centuries after the occurrence of the supposed event; his lordship holding a charter in his right hand with the words,

I. Lurick, for love of thee, Do set Coventry toll free.

And there is still a yearly procession of a naked figure observed by the grateful citizens, on Friday after Trinity Sunday. From this Earl of Chester lineally descended its descent from the royal line of Thomond: a race of princes which sprung from the celebrated Hibernian monarch, Brian Boru, who commenced his reign in 1002, and terminated it, with his life, at the battle of Clontarf in 1014. The last of these princes, Cun Burr O'Bryan, who was inaugurated King of Thomond in 1298, d. in 1540, when his son was set aside, and the principality usurped by his brother, Mcnamara O'Bryan, who surrendered his royalty to King Henry VIII., and was created in consequence, by that monarch, 1 July, 1543, Earl of Thomond, with remainder to his deposed nephew, Dungough O'Bryan; and Baron of Inchiquin, to his own heirs male, and for the better support of these honors, the King granted and confirmed to him and his heirs male, all his lands and possessions in Thomond, beyond the river Shannon, with all and singular the advowsons and patronages in the said premises, bishoprics excepted, to hold by knights' service. George Pretyman, Esq., of Old Newton and Bacton, who d. to 1722, leaving two sons, Biography.

This ancient house deduces its descent from Lodovio, a noble Norman, who, settling in England during the reign of Henry I., assumed the surname of Townshend, and by marriage with Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Sir Thomas de Haville, obtained the manor of Raynham, Co. This ancient family derives its surname from the lordship of Trelawny, or Treelen, in the parish of Sir John, who was a soldier, acquired great renown in the French wars of Henry V., and obtained from that monarch a pension of £20 a year. Under the figure of King Henry, which formerly stood over the great gate at Lancaster, was the dietich—

Tyrell, Sir John-Tyssen, of Boreham House, 1808.

TYRELL

Co. Essex, by 21 Dec., 1785; m. 19 May, 1819, Elizabeth, eldest dau. and co-heir of the late Sir Thomas Pilkington, Bart., and by that lady (from whom he was divorced by Act of Parliament) he has three daughters. Sir John s. his father as 2nd Bart. 3 Aug., 1832, and is M.P. for the northern division of Essex.

Lineage.

This family has been of knightly degree ever since the Conquest, when Sir Walter Tyrell, a Norman Knight, came into England and soon after became tenant of the manor of Langham, Co. Essex, which he held at the general survey, under Richard de Tonbrigg. Of this Sir Walter, Morant, in his History of Essex, observes, "whether he was the same person who shot William Rufus in New Forest, or whether he did at the instigation of Archbishop Amselin, through the persuasion of a fanatic monk, as it is asserted by Alan de Insinis, we are not able to determine." It is far, indeed, from being an ascertained point, that this family is descended from the Walter Tyrell who slew Rufus; and as far as it is from being certain that the deed was done designedly.

Ordericus Vitalis, in his History of Normandie, relates, that Sir Walter Tyrell, on his deathbed, declared that he was not so much as in the field when William Rufus was killed. From Sir Walter Tyrell descended

Thomas Tyrell, Esq., of Rumney Tyrell, Co. Essex, who m. Margaret, dau. of John Filhol, Esq., of Old Hall, and had issue two sons,

1. John (Sir), of Here, Sheriff of Essex and Hertfordshire in 1493, who served in the French war of King Henry V., and was appointed by that monarch Surveyor of the Carpenters for the new works of Calais, with the wages of twelve sous a day. Sir John was also Treasurer of the Household to King Henry VI., and marrying Alice, dau. and co-heir of William Coggeshall, of Little Sandford, Co. Essex, had a son, John Tyrell, Esq., who was created a Baronet in 1649, which Barony became extinct on the demise, without issue, of Sir John, the 5th Baronet.

2. Thomas,

The eldest son,

The Wakes are mentioned by Brompton, is the in- mediate train of the Conqueror; but it is the opinion of antiquaries, that the individual of the name of Wake, recorded in the roll of Battle Abbey, was one of those who, being weary of Harold's rule, fled into Normandy, and invited Duke William; hence the family is supposed to have been of importance prior to the Conquest.

From Baldwin, Lord Wake, founder of the Abbey of Bron, who d. in 1136, descended, through a long line of en- neal ancestors.

Linage.

The surname of this family derived from a place in Co. Northampton, was anciently written Walgrave, and we find, so far back as the year 1295, John de Walgrave serving the office of Sheriff of London. The great-grandson of this eminent citizen,

Sir Richard Walgrave, Knt., of Smallbridge, Co. Suffolk, having represented that shire in parliament in the reigns of Edward III. and Richard II., was chosen Speaker of the House of Commons in the latter. an office which he was obliged to serve by the com- mand of the King, although entitring to be excused. He d. in 1401, and was s. by his son (by his wife Joan, dau. and heiress of Silvester, of Bros, in Suffolk), Sir Richard Walgrave, Knt., who, succeeding to the inheritance of his mother, was styled Lord of Bures and Silvesters; which Sir Richard, with Lord Clinton, Sir John Howard, and Lord Falcobroth, was appointed in 1402, to keep the seas; and landing 10,000 m. in Brittany, won the town of Compes, with the Isle of Rieu. field, the two other principal officers, who had offended on the same account, was first committed to the Fleet, 29 Aug., and, two days afterwards, sent to the Tower. Sir Edward remained in custody, although permitted to remove to his own house, in consequence of indisposition, until the accession of his royal mistress to the throne, when he was recommissioned by being sworn of the Privy Council, constituted Master of the Great Wardrobe, and receiving a grant of the manor of Chetwood, in Somersetshire. At the approaching of Lord Essex's army in Cornwull, 1644, Sir Edward, with his regiments, kept the pass at Saltash, and, being charged by the parliamentary horse, in an attempt to break through, his horse rallied his men, and although twice unhorsed, eventually succeeded in making forty prisoners. Lineage.

The family of Wallace, which the Baronetcy represents, is the parent stock whence the renowned Sir William Wallace descended, and it has been established in Scotland since the reign of King David, for we find its founder, Emerus Galleus, a subscribing witness to that monarch's foundation-charter of the Abbey of Kebo.

Richard Wallace (supposed to be the son of Emerus) obtained the extensive estate of Riccarton, which was possessed by his descendants as military tenents of the Stewarts, until that family ascended the throne, when the Wallaces, no longer sub-feudal vassals, became tenants to this crown in capite. From this Richard (the common progenitor of all the numerous families of Wallace) immediately descended Adam Wallace, of Riccarton, living about the middle of the 15th century, who left two sons, Richard, his successor, Malcolm, Laird of Elderslie, who m. Jean, dau. of Sir Ronald Crawford, of Crabbe, Sheriff of Ayr, and was father of the celebrated Sir William Wallace, of Elderslie, the victorious opponent of the English monarch, Edward I., and the patriotic upholder of the freedom of Scotland. This illustrious hero, who so often braved the dangers of the battle field, and bore defiance to his own and his country's foes, fell at length a victim of perfidy, beneath the hand of the foreigner, 23 Aug. 1305, having been tricked into the hands of his enemies by one of his associates, Sir John Montejth. Sir William Wallace leaving no legitimate issue, the land and natural daughter, who m. Sir William Baillie, of Haprig), his estate of Elderslie returned to the elder branch of Riccarton, since of Craigie, and went out again in patronymy, to another younger branch of the family, about the beginning of the reign of King Robert III.; whose descendants continued a separate branch until 1678, when the estate again reverted to the original stock. Mrs Scott, mother of the present Duchess of Portland, and of Viscountess Conings, was supposed to be the last representative, in the direct line, of this immortal hero. His collateral descendant is the present Robert Wallace, Esq., of Kelly, in Ayrshire, M.P. for Greenock. (See Burke's Lerman, vol. ii. p. 274.)

Adam Wallace was s. at his decease by his elder son, Sir Richard Wallace, of Riccarton, whose grandsons: John Wallace, of Riccarton, m. Sir John, who is Dep-Lieu. of the counties of Hereford and Radnor, was created a baronet 30 Sept., 1831, in consideration of his being the eldest co-heir and representative of Gen. Sir Thomas Morgan, Bart., whose title (extinct since 1708) was conferred upon him, in 1660, as a reward for his great military services, and for his zeal in forwarding the Restoration.

Lineage.
This very ancient family dates its first establishment in England from the conquest, being descended from William Malet, Constable of York, a Norman baron of great distinction, to whose charge the remains of Harold were intrusted after the battle of Hastings, and who was himself slain in action with the Danes in 1066. His eldest son, Robert Malet, Lord Great Chamberlain of England in the reign of Henry I., and Baron of Eye, was grandfather of Walter Malet, Lord of Sibton, whose 2nd son, Reginald, took the name of Peyton from that lordship, and was grandfather of Sir John de Peyton, Knt. (ancestor of that distinguished family,) and also of
Sir Robert de Ufford, Knt. who assumed that surname from his Lordship of Ufford, in Suffolk; he was appointed Lord Justice of Ireland in 1660, accompanied Edward I. in his expedition to the Holy Land in 1270, was again Justice of Ireland in 1276, and died in 1301, leaving issue, by his wife Mary, widow of William, Baron de Say; John de Ufford, Arch Archbishop of Canterbury, and Sir Robert de Ufford, Knt. who having greatly distinguished himself in the Scotch wars of Edward I., was summoned to parliament as Lord Ufford in 1316, (see Burks Extinct Peerage.) This powerful baron married Cicely, dau. and co-heiress of Sir Robert de Walwynen, Knt. Lord of Walsham, (by Mary, sister and heiress of William de Bount, Baron of Elsworth,) and by her had issue amongst other children, Robert de Ufford, Earl of Suffolk, K.G. one of the most eminent commanders in the French wars of Edward III.; and Sir Edmund de Walsham, Knt. Lord of Coltum, in Norfolk; who, in compliance with a very prevalent custom at that period, adopted the name which his descendants have since borne, from his mother's Lordship of Walsham, in Suffolk. Sir Edmund was great grandfather of Thomas Walsham, Esq. of Coltum, who is mentioned in "Home's Britannia," as one of the principal gentry of Norfolk in the reign of Henry V., and whose 2nd son, Richard Walsham, Esq. being possessed of lands in Cheshire in right of his wife, Joan. dau. and heiress of his kinsman John Walsham, settled in that county, and was father of JOHN WALSH, Esq. of Presteigne, who obtained considerable possessions in Radnorshire, by his marriage with Mary, granddaughter and co-heiress of Sir Jenkin Hervey, Knt. of Llanvair, Co. Montgomery, and by her was grandfather of JOHN WALSH, Esq of Presteigne, who m. Jane, dau. and heiress of Thomas Chapman, Esq. a Herefordshire Justice of the Peace. His grandson,

JOHN WALSH, Esq. of Knill Court, Deputy Lieutenant of the county of Radnor. He m. Hester, eldest dau. and eventual co-heiress (with her sister Annaret), the wife of Thomas Clutton, Esq. of Penaux of Sir John Morgan, Bart., of Kninesley Castle, in Herefordshire, M.P. for that county, and governor of Chester; and had issue,

John, his heir,

Thomas, of Mahollam, Herefordshire, d. w.o. in 1704. He was succeeded in 1704, by his eldest son,

JOHN WALSH, Esq. of Knill Court, Deputy Lieutenant of the county of Radnor, who having m. Elizabeth, dau. and co-heiress of Alderman Forde, of Hereford, died in 1721, without issue male, when his only child, sequence of this measure, which the prelate could nothave foreseen. On the return of the royal James to his kingdom, he found his venerable guardian still filling his archiepiscopal chair of Saint Andrews. Wardlaw was immediately sent for, and during his life he continued the chiefstay of his royal master. Besides founding the University, this manifest act pre-

WATERFORD AND WEXFORD.

WATERFORD AND WEXFORD, EARL OF, (John Talbot,) Baron of Dungarvon, and hereditary high-seneschal of Ireland (Earl of Shrewshury, in England; see that dignity,
On 17 July, 1346, ANZ, Henry VI., created John Talbot 1st Earl of Shrewshury, whom his majesty styles in the patent, "John, Earl of Shrewshury and of Wexford, Lord Furnivall and Le Strange," Earl of Waterford, and Baron of Dungarvon, to hold the same with the extensive estates and royalties therein mentioned, by the service of being seneschal of the King in Ireland, in remainder to the heirs male of his body. These honors, with the estates thus granted, as well as the whole county of Wexford, already in Lord Shrewshury's possession by inheritance, continued in the enjoyment of the successive earls until 1387, when the "Act of Absentees" was passed, by which the estates of the Talbot family, and others, were seized on by the crown. On this account, in 1612, when Gilbert, Lord Shrewshury, sought his writ, as a peer of Ireland, the English judges were consulted, who gave an opinion, that the act which divested the estates had the same effect as to honors, which, according to their construction, could not exist without territorial possessions. But there appear, in the paper offices, numerous acts of the king and his council, of the lord-lieutenant and privy-council of Ireland, petitions of the nobility of England, and the resident peers of Ireland, as also several orders on the journals of the lords' house, proving that however well founded this opinion might be as to peerage in England, it was wholly opposed to, and inconsistent with, the long established rights of the peerage, prerogative to the crown, and law of parliament, as then and previously known in Ireland. Therefore numerous creations of persons (who had no estates in Ireland,) by James I. and his successor, and the different subsequent resolutions of the house of lords show that this opinion was not received as law, and consequently, in the years 1661, 1692, and 1697, Francis and Charles, Earls of Waterford, are recognized on the journals of the house, as Earls of Waterford and peers of Ireland. On the death of the latter the titles devolved upon a branch of the family labouring under religious disabilities, and these disabilities continued from that year, 1717, until 1829, when they were removed by parliament, and the present earl, in 1831, petitioned the house of lords for leave to vote for representative peers of Ireland, as eldest heir male of John, 1st Earl of Shrewshury, under the patent of Henry VI., creating the earldom of Waterford, barony of Dungarvan, and seneschalship of Ireland, as above mentioned. This petition was referred to a committee of privileges, wherein, after hearing counsel on several occasions, and after much legal argument, it was at length decided that his lordship's claim and right to vote should be, and was thereby allowed.

THE MARQUESS'S MATERNAL FAMILY.

The very eminent family of Wesley, or Wellesley, or, as it was formerly written, de Wesley, alias Wellesley, was founded in Ireland, by a gentleman of that name, a member of an ancient Anglo-Saxon family, who held the honorable station of standard bearer to King Henry II., and having accompanied that monarch into Ireland, in 1172, obtained, for his military services, large grants of land in the counties of Kildare and Killarney, a considerable portion of which his descendant still enjoys. From this successful soldier descended

William de Wellesley, who appears to have been summoned to parliament as a Baronet, and to the title of Earl of Oragh, in 1326, and had a grant by patent, from Edward II. of the custody of the Castle of Kildare, for life; but that monarch conferring, subsequently, the office upon John Fitz-Thomas, Earl of Kildare, together with the county of Kildare, to hold to the present day; for ever, William de Wellesley was removed, and lost the fee of £20 a year an-nexed thereunto; in recompense whereof, however, King Edward III. granted him a commission, dated at Molyngar, March, 1344, to have the custody of the manor of Demer, then in the crown, from 1 Aug., 1341, with the annual fee of twenty marks. His Lordship was father of Sir Richard de Wellesley, who served the office of Sheriff of Kildare in the year 1416. This gentleman does not appear to have inherited the barony from his father, and for that reason that dignity ceased with the first possessor, we have not been able to ascertain. Sir Richard m. Johanna, eldest dau., and eventually heiress of Sir Nicholas de Castlemartin, by which alliance they obtained the Lordships of Dangan, Mornington, Clonebegny, and several other manors, and was s. by his son, Gerard de Wellesley, of Dangan, from whom legally descended.

William Wellesley, Esq., of Dangan Castle, who m. Elizabeth, dau. of James Cusack, Esq., of Portroin, Co. Dublin, and was s. by his eldest son,

His Lordship is Lord-Lieutenant of the county of Peebles. \[\text{Zirrag.}\]

This ancient family traces its origin to John, baronial Lord of Wemyss, whence the surname was probably derived, who was younger son of the celebrated Macduff, Thane of Fife, the vanquisher of the tyrant Macbeth.

Sir Michael de Wemyss was sent, according to Forsdik, in 1626, with Sir Michael Scott, to Norway, by the lords of the regency in Scotland, to conduct the young Queen Marjory to her dominions; but her Majesty unfortunately died upon the journey, at the Orkneys. Sir Michael swore fealty to Edward I., in 1296, and he witnessed the act of settlement of the crown of Scotland, by King Robert I., at Ayr, in 1313. From Sir Michael lineally descended *

Sir John Wemyss, of Wemyss, who m. first, in 1574, Margaret, eldest dau. of William, Earl of Morton, but by that lady had no issue; and, secondly, in 1581, Anne, sister of James, Earl of Moray, by whom he had, with other issue, Sir John Wemyss, of Wemyss, who was created a baronet 29 May, 1625, and elevated to the peerage of Scotland, as Baron Wemyss of Elcho, 1 April, 1626. His lordship was advanced to the dignities of Earl of Wemyss, in the Co. Fife, and Lord Elcho and Methil, 25 June, 1633. WEN

WENMAN.

Wenman, Baroness (Sophia-Elizabeth Wykeham), of Tliame Park, Co. Oxford, so created in 1834.

Linage.

The family of Wykeham has been settled at Swalecliffe from a very remote period; we find mention of a Sir Ralph Wykeham, living in the time of King John, and of a Sir Robert Wykeham, contemporary with Henry III.; but of these knights little more is recorded. The great luminary of the family was the celebrated Bishop of Winchester—William of Wykeham—the founder of Winchester College, and New College, Oxford. It is still, however, a contested point whether this eminent churchman was or was not a descendant of the Wykeham of Swalecliffe. They have, from time immemorial, claimed him as one of their race; and in later times an intermarriage has taken place between Richard Wykeham, of Swalecliffe, and the sister of Richard Fennies, last Viscount Saye and Sele, who was the lineal descendant and ultimate heiress of William of Wykeham.

Robert Wykeham, Lord of Swalecliffe at the commencement of the 14th century, was direct ancestor of Richard Wykeham, Esq., of Swalecliffe, who m. Vere-Alcie, dau. of the Rev. Richard Fennies, and sister and co-heir of Richard, last Viscount Saye and Sele, by whom (who d. in 1769,) he had issue, WENTWORTH.

WENTWORTH, Sir Charles-Mary, Bart., of Parlott, Co. Lincoln, D.C.L.; b. in 1773; s. to the title, as 2nd baronet, at the decease of his father, 1820.

Lineage.

"The ancient and honorable family of Wentworth," says Thorresby, in his History of Leeds, "which for six hundred years hath borne the honor of knighthood, was seated four hundred years before that in the county of York; the ancient and chief seat of the principal branch of this noble family hath been, for many ages, at Wentworth Woodhouse, in the wapentake of Straford, whereby they spread into other parts, at Ganthorpe Hall, 2nd Potter Newton, in the parish of Leeds." Thorresby gives two pedigrees of the Wentworth family. In the second, wherein he deduces the descent to Sir Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford, who was beheaded 12 May, 1641, he commences with Reginald Wyntond de Wentworth, whose descendant in the seventh generation, Robert de Wentworth, living in the reign of Henry III., m. Emma, daughter and heiress of the ancient family of Woodhouse.

The Wentworths of Yorkshire intermarried with the Neville and Clifford families, previous to the sixteenth century, and with many other families of the first distinction; and we find on record, William de Wentworth, abbot of the priory of Monk Bretton, in Yorkshire, in 1223; and Hugh, son of Henry de Wentworth, who gave eleven acres of his demesne lands in Wentworth to the said priory in 1292. Of this very illustrious family was

William Wentworth, Esq., who emigrated from Co. York to Boston, in America, in the year 1292, and removed, subsequently, to New Hampshire. This gentleman was grandfather of remaining firmly attached to the cause of his Sovereign, he was rewarded with the government of Nova Scotia, and the honourable privilege of bearing, in the chevron of his arms, two keys, emblematic of his fidelity. Mr. Wentworth, who was created a Baronet 16 May, 1706, returned to England in 1710, after forty-six years of faithful and devoted services in North America. He m. Lineage.

This family has been settled in Ireland since the subjugation of that country by Henry II. Its founder,

Sir Gilbert de Nugent, one of the knights who accompanied Hugh de Lacy in the expedition to Ireland, having m. Rosa, the sister of the said Hugh, obtained thereby the lordship of Delvin; but, his sons predeceasing him, he was t. at his decease by his brother,

Richard Nugent, whose only dau. and heiress carried the barony of Delvin into the family of Johns, or Jones, into which she married, and it so remained until brought back by the intermarriage of

Sir William Nugent, of Beltragh, descended from Christopher Nugent, Esq., the third brother of Sir Gilbert, with Catherine, dam. and heiress of John Pits Jones, Baron of Delvin, This Sir William was elected, 19 November, 1401, Sheriff of Meath, by the county; in which office he was confirmed by the King, for one year, and again during pleasure, by patent, 21 November, 1402. He was t. at his decease by his eldest son,

Richard, 2nd Baron of Delvin, who, in consequence of his services and expenses in the King's wars, to the impoverishment of his fortune, had an order, dated at Trim, 20 February, 1426, to receive twenty marks out of the exchequer. This Richard m. Catherine, dau. of Thomas Drake, sister and heiress of Nicholas Drake, of Drakethorpe, Co. Meath, and was t. by his eldest son, tuted by the Lords Justices and Council, in 1506, commissioner and leader. In chief of all the forces despatched for the defence of the counties of Dublin, Meath, Kildare, and Louth. His Lordship was, subsequently, summoned to parliament in 1508, but failing to appear, he was fined forty shillings for non-attendance. In 1544, Lord Delvin accompanied the Earl of Kildare to the famous battle of Knocktough, in Connaught, and was the first to throw a spear into the ranks of the Irish, by which he chanced to kill one of the Barons. In 1537, he was nominated Lord Deputy of Ireland, and conducted the public affairs with integrity and honor, until treacherously taken prisoner by O'Connor. That native chief than having made incursions upon the confines of the Pale, in 1528, Lord Delvin ordered the detention of a yearly rent, due to him out of certain estates of lands in the county of Meath, which procedure led to a conference at the castle of Rathin, belonging to Sir William D'Arcy, when, by stratagem, the Lord Deputy was seized and detained prisoner, many of his attendants being slain, wounded, and taken. Walter Wellesley, of Dangan Castle, and Sir Walter Delahide, of Moyclare, were, subsequently, deputed to expostulate with O'Connor, and to procure his Lordship's liberation, but ineffectually; when another Lord Deputy was appointed to administer the government. Westmeath; and being, in 1593, appointed, by commission, leader of the forces raised in the county of Westmeath, at the general hosting, on the hill of Tarah, he brought with the Nugents, his kinsmen, twenty horses thither; and so acceptable were his services to Queen Elizabeth, that, by privy seal, A. D. 7 May, 1597, she ordered him a grant in fee farm, of so many manors and forfeited lands, in the counties of Cavan and Longford, as should amount to the crown-rent £100 a year English. But this grant not having been executed during his life, on account of the troubles in Ireland, King James, 10 August, 1603, ordered £500 in lands, per annum, to be granted to his Earlship m. WIL

WILLOUGHBY DE ERESBY.

WILLOUGHBY DE ERESBY, Baron, (Peter-Robert Drummond-Burrell,) and Baron Gwydyr, of Gwydyr, Co. Carnarvon, and a Privy Councillor; b. in March, 1782; m. 20 April, 1807, Clementina-Sarah, dau. and sole heiress of James Drummond, 1st Lord Perth, (a dignity now extinct) by whom he has issue, ALBIE, b. 25 Dec. 1821.

In consequence of his alliance with the heiress of Lord Perth, his Lordship assumed by sign manual, 5th of November succeeding his marriage, the additional surname and arms of Drummond. He inherited the Barony of Gwydyr, as 2nd Baron, at the decease of his father, 29 June, 1829, and the ancient Barony of Willoughby de Eresby, as 19th Baron, upon the demise of his mother, 29 Dec., 1828, as well as the joint-hereditary great-chamberlainship of England.

Lineage.

This is one of the very ancient baronies created by writ of summons, which pass, being heritable by heirs male or females, at different periods, into different families, and sometimes remain for centuries dormant; for, in the instance of there being no male heir, but several female, the barony does not devolve upon the eldest dau., but upon all conjointly, and cannot, consequently, be inherited until there be a single heir to the whole, without the especial interference of the crown.

The Lordship of Eresby, which constituted the head of this barony, was settled, by William the Conqueror, with other manors, upon Walter de Bec, one of his companions in arms, who m. Agnes, dau. and heiress of Hugh, son of Pinco, Lord of Tatshaih, in the Co. Lincoln, and was s. by his eldest son,

Henry de Bec, of Eresby, in the Co. Lincoln, whose son and heir,

Walter de Bec, m. Eva, niece and heiress of Walter de Grey, Archbishop of York, and was s. by his eldest son,

Henry Bec, who m. Hawise, sister of Thomas de Maleton, and was s. by his son,

Walter Bec, who left three sons,

John, of whom presently.

Anthony, Bishop of Durham, and patriarch of Jerusalem. Of this prelate, Godwin, in his catalogue of bishops, gives the following account: " Before the end of that year, 1093, it seems that Anthony Biske was invested in the bishopric of Durham, in which he so flourished, as are we think any of his predecessors came neer him. He was wonderfull rich, not onely in ready money, but in lands also and temporal renownes; for he might dispand yeerly (besides what he belonged to his priory) 5000 marks. Much of that he be ded of the Lord Vesly, who thinking so to consuage it unto his base son, William, (for that he bad no other issue,) passed it over to this Bishop in trust; which trust, men say, he never answerd. A man now of this extraordinary worth must not content himselfe with ordinary titles: therefore he procured the pepe to make him patriarch of Hierusalem, and obtained of the kig the principality of the Isles of Man." (For a more detailed narrative of this celebrated prelate and the family of Bec, see Burke's Extinct and Dormant Peerage.)

Thomas, Lord Bishop of St. David's.

The eldest son and heir,

John, had license of King Edward I. in the 4th year of that monarch's reign, to make a castle of his manor-house at Eresby, and was summoned to parliament, amongst the Barons of the realm, in the 23rd and 24th of the same reign; dying in seven years afterwards, his lordship left issue, by his wife, Sarah, dau. of Thomas, Lord Fornival,

Walter, his son and heir, Lord of Eresby, who survived his father but a year or two, and d. issueless, when the Barony of Eresby, of Eresby, fell into instance, as it still continues.

Alice. Married m. to Richard de Harcourt.

Mary, d. unmarried.

Alice Berk, the eldest dau., and one of the co-heiresses of her brother, married

Sir William de Willoughby, Knt., great-grandson of Ralph de Willoughby, Lord of the manor of Willoughby, in the Co. Lincoln, which Sir William de Willoughby, in the 54th of Henry III., was signed with the cross, together with many other persons of the first rank, who accompanied this monarch's son, Prince Edward, into the Holy Land. He d. in 1306, and was s. by his eldest son, Robert Willoughby, who, upon the decease of Anthony Berk, Bishop of Durham, succeeded, as next heir to that prelate. This Robert Willoughby being actively engaged in the French and Scottish wars of King Edward I., was summoned to parliament amongst the Barons of the realm, in the 7th of Edward II., (29th July, 1313,) as Lord Willoughby de Eresby, and dying in three years afterwards, was s. by his son, (by his first wife, Dorothy, dau. of Edmund, Lord Dormer.)

John Willoughby, then a minor, who was committed to the wardship of William, Lord Zouch, of Harringworth, for which that nobleman paid a thousand marks to the king. In the 30th of Edward II., this John Willoughby received the honor of Knighthood, by bathing, &c., having all the necessary appendages out of the king's wardrobe; and in the 1st of Edward III., making proof of his age, had livery of his lands, and was summoned to parliament from 27 Jan., 1332, to 10 March, 1340. His lordship subsequently distinguished himself in the Scottish wars, and was one of the principal Commanders at the battle of Crescent. He m. Joan, dau. and heiress of Sir Thomas Boseline, Knt., and was s. by his eldest son,

King of Castle. Lord Willoughby m. 1st, Alice, dau. of Sir William Skipwith, by whom he had

His lordship espoused, 2ndly, Margery, dau. of William, Lord Zouch, of Harrington, but had no issue; and, 3rdly, Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of William, Lord Latimer, and widow of John, 1st Lord Strange, but it does not appear that he had any other issue. He d. 13th Richard II., and was s. by his eldest son, WILLIAM, 3rd Baron. This nobleman was one of the Peers in the parliament of the 2nd of Richard II., when that monarch made a formal resignation of his royal dignity. His lordship m. 1st, Lucy, dau. of Roger, Lord Strange, of Knaiken, by whom he had (with four daughters)
Robert, his successor.

Christopher, from whom the Lords Willoughby of Parham, derived.
Thomas, ancestor of Lord Middleton.
Lord Willoughby m. 2ndly, Joan, dau. of Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, (by Joan, survived the Fair Maid Kent, only dau. of Edmund, Earl of Kent, son of King Edward II.,) and widow of Edmund, of Langley, Duke of York, son of King Edward III. (Her ladyship, after Lord Willoughby's decease, m. a 3rd husband, Henry, Lord Scrope; and a 4th, Henry Bromfette, Lord Vesey). Lord Willoughby de Eresby et al. in the 11th of Henry IV., and was s. by his elder son, Robert, 6th Baron. This nobleman took a distinguished part in the French wars of Henry V., and participated in the triumph of Agincourt. He was subsequently a beholding of the castle of Caen, and at the protracted siege of Roan. In the reign of Henry VI. he shared the Earl of Vernolli; and, with Sir John Fastolf, soon afterwards gallantly defeated a projected surprise of Charles de Villiers. For all these amoutant services, his lordship was created Lord Willoughby, of Mondlay and Beamsmeugil, and Earl of Vendeume and Beannmont, and installed a Knight of the most noble order of the Garter. His Lordship m. 1st, Elizabeth, youngest dau. of John Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, by whom he had an only dau., Joan. He espoused 2ndly, Maud, dau. of Sir Richard Stanhope, Knight, and cousin and co-heiress of Ralph, Lord Cromwell, of Tatshali, but had no other issue. His lordship dying in the 50th of Henry VI., the honors acquired by himself expired, while the barony devolved upon his only dau. and heiress, JOAN WILLOUGHBY, who m.
SIR RICHARD WELLES, Knight, who bore in her right the title of Lord Willoughby de Eresby, and was summoned to parliament, as 7th Baron, in 1355. His lordship was son of Leo, 6th Baron Welles, who fell in one of the conflicts between the Houses of York and Lancaster, and was attainted in 1461. Lord Wil-oughby obtained a full restoration, however, in blood and honors in 1470. He died in 1512, and his eldest son, ROBERT, 8th Lord Welles, and 8th Lord Willoughby, who coming into immediate conflict with the Yorkists, under King Edward IV. at Stamford, and ansering a signet deed, was taken prisoner and beheaded (refer to BURKE'S Extinct Peerage). The baronies then devolved upon the last Lord's only sister and heiress, JOAN WELLES, who m.
RICHARD HASTINGS, and he was summoned to parliament, as Baron Welles; but dying without issue in 1503, and his lady in three years afterwards, the ancient barony of Willoughby reverted to her ladyship's kinsman (refer to Sir Thomas Willoughby, younger son of William, 5th Baron).

KATHERINE, Baronesse Willoughby de Eresby. Her ladyship m. to William, 6th Duke of Suffolk, brother in law of King Henry VIII., by whom she had two sons, Henry and Charles, who both d. in minority. PERSHING BERTIE, claimed the ancient barony, and was summoned to parliament, as 10th Lord Willoughby de Eresby, 16 January, 1535. His ladyship m. Lady Mary Vere, sister to John, 2nd Earl of Oxford, and sister and heiress of Edward, 11th Earl of Oxford, Lord-High-Chamberlain of England, by whom he had five sons and a daughter, Catherine, who m. Sir Lewis Watson, of Rockingham Castle, Co. Northampton, subsequently created Lord Rockingham. Lord Wil-oughby d. in 1601, and was s. by his eldest son, Robert, 11th Baron, who claimed the Earldom of Oxford, and the Great-Chamberlainship of England, in right of his mother, but succeeded in establishing his pretensions to the Chamberlainship only; he was, however, created Earl of Lindsey, 22 November, 1626.
In 1630, his Lordship was installed a Knight of the Garter; and, at the breaking out of the civil war, was nominated Commander-in-Chief of the King's Lordship. Of this nobleman, Lord Clarendon says, "He was a man of great honor, and spent the youth and vigour of his age in military actions and commands; and albeit he indulged to himself great liberties of life, yet he preserved his soul and body, and a very great interest in his country, as appears by the supplies he and his son brought to the King's army; the companies of his own regiment of foot being commanded by the principal knights and gentlemen of Lincolnshire, who engaged themselves in their service, principally out of their personal affection for him."
The Barony of Willoughby de Eresby merged in this Earldom of Lindsey, and the Dukeedom of Ancaster, to which honor the 4th Earl was elevated, until the demise of Robert, 6th Duke, without issue, in 1779 (see BURKE'S Extinct Peerage), when the Dukeedom of Ancaster, and the Marquises and Earldoms of Lindsey, reverted to his Grace's uncle, the Hon. Brownlow Bertie, with whom those honors expired in 1899; and the ancient Barony of Willoughby de Eresby fell into abeyance between his Grace's sisters and heiresses, PASCILLA BARBARA ELIZABETH, the wife of Sir Peter Burrell, Bart., 1st Baron Gwydyd;
And
GEORGINA CHARLOTTE, the wife of George James, 1st Marquis Cobhoudvcky;

Lineage.

The name of Wylmot, or Wilmot, is very ancient in England. Speed mentions Wilmot, a nobleman of Sussex, in the time of King Ethelred. The family before us (as we find by deeds in their possession, some of which were made before the custom of dating those instruments by date 1839) was settled, antecedently to the Conquest, in Nottinghamshire; from whence it removed into the Co. Derby, in 1339, where, according to Sir William Dugdale, it flourished in great repute, and produced many eminent persons.

John Wilmot, Esq., of Spordon, purchasing the estate of Chaddesden, in Derbyshire, made it the place of his residence, where his descendants have since continued. From this John lineally sprung

Lineage.

The family represented by this peerage, and the house of Cholmondeley, derive from a common progenitor, namely,

Robert FitzHugh, of Malpas, in Cheshire, one of the Barons of Hugh Lupus, Earl of Chester (esp. William the Foxgovernor, whose only dau. and heiress married William le Belward, who thus acquired the Barony of Malpas, and was s. by his son,

David de Egerton, who was heir to his uncle, William, Baron of Malpas, but was ousted of its inheritance by his bastard cousin, David. It is, however, stated, by Camden, that he eventually recovered a moiety of the Barony. From this David linearly descended,

Sir John Egerton, of Egerton, Knt. who fell, with the flower of the Cheshire gentry, in the memorable battle fought 27 Sept., 1550, at Bioreleth, in Staffordshire, between the Lord Dudley, on the part of Henry VIII. and Richard Neville, Earl of Salisbury, the general of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York. Of this memorable conflict, Drayton, in his "Polyolbion," alluding to the knights of Cheshire, thus speaks:—

"There fought Dutton kill'd; a done doth kill a Done; A Hooth a Booth; and Leigh by Leigh is overthrow'd; A Venables against a Venables doth stand; And Trouthbeck lighteth with a Trouthbeck hand to hand; There a Molines doth make a Molines to die; And Egerton the strength of Egerton doth try. Oh! Cheshire, thou art as from this own native gore; So much of thy death this day thus never shall be lost! Above two thousand men upon the earth were threw, Of whom the greater part were naturally thine owne."

Sir John Egerton m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Pitton, of Cheshunt, son, Philip, and had issue,

He was installed a Knight of the Garter, and held the important office of Lord Treasurer of England during the reigns of Edward VI, and Queen Mary and Elizabeth. The Marquess being asked how he had contrived to preserve the treasurership through so long a series of changeable years, replied, "I put a willow, not an oak." Evidently, he erected the beautiful and magnificent seat called Basing, in the Co. Southampton. His lordship m. His lordship had, however, the satisfaction of witnessing the restoration of the monarchy. He d. in 1674, and was buried at Englefield, where following lines, by Dryden, appear upon his monument:

"He who in impious times and sordid stood, And amidst rebellion dared be just and good; Whose arms asserted, and whose sufferings more Confident of the cause, for which he sought before, Rests here, rewarded by a heavenly prize: For what his earthly could not compensate, Pray, reader, that such times no more appear, Or if they happen, learn the true honor here. Ask of this age's faith and loyalty, Which (to preserve them) heaven confided in thee."

Few subjects could a king like thine deserve; And fewer such a king so well could serve. Best king, best subject, whose exalted state By sufferings rose, and gave the law to fate; Such souls are rare, but mighty patterns given To earth, and meant forornament to heaven."

He had the spleen to an high degree, and affected an extravagant behaviour; for many weeks he would not open his mouth, till such an hour of the day, when he thought the air was pure. He changed the day into night, and often hunted by torch-light, and took all sorts of liberties to himself; many of which were very disgraceful to those about him. He was a man of profuse expense, and of a most ravenous avarice to support that; and though he was much hated, yet he carried matters before him with such authority and success, that he was in all respects the great riddle of the age." His Grace was s. by his eldest son.

LINEAGE.

This very ancient family of the principality of Wales is descended from Sir Dudo Harri, or the Handsome, a British chiefman, who resided at Tremadog, and was lord of Talyllyn, in the beginning of the twelfth century. The paternal surname was originally William. The first Baronet,

1. WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Esq., an eminent lawyer, Recorder of Chester; and Speaker of the House of Commons in the reign of Charles II., was knighted by King James II., upon his appointment to the Solicitor-Generalship, and created a Baronet 6 July, 1688. Sir William, while Speaker, was tried, upon an information brought against him in the Court of King's Bench, for a libel, in causing to be printed (as Speaker of the House of Commons) the informations of Thomas Dugard and his son, and, although he pleaded the privilege of parliament, and that he had acted in obedience to the orders of the House, he was, nevertheless, fined ten thousand pounds; the greater part of which he was, eventually, compelled to pay.

Sir William was constituted one of the Kings's Coun- cil, after the Revolution, and terminated his political life by the introduction of the Treating Act, which passed into a law, and still continues one of the safeguards to the purity of parliament. the same historian, "The three eldest having en-kenny, the rejected claimant.

Lord Slane d. in 1626, and was s. by his son, Christopher Fleming, Lord Slane;* This nobleman, while yet scarcely eighteen years of age, unhap-sily saw in his own demesne the great contest between James and William: he fled to Ireland, and from there to the deck of Slane Castle, where the Earl of Essex entertained King James the night before that memorable engagement. In consequence of his Lordship's fidelity to that unfortunate Monarch, from whose family his predecessors had received so many favours, he was outlawed and attainted in the year 1691, and all the ancient family estates became foreeited, and were sold, pursuant to the provisions of the English statute 17th and 18th William III. After the accession, however, of Queen Anne, who the crown considered his youth and peculiar situation, as also the services he had rendered her Majesty in her armies as abroad, his Lordship received a grant, 7 April, 1707, of £500 per annum for his support; and, by an act of the English parliament, was subsequently restored in blood. It should be observed, that the parliament of Ireland had already, 7 Dec. 1699, passed an act, confirming the attainder of Christopher Fleming, late Baron of Slane; and by a resolution of the House of Lords of that kingdom, made 2 Dec. 1697, it was ardered, "that such lords whose ancestors or themselves stand outlawed on record, ought not to have privilege of sitting in this house, or take upon them, on any occasion, any title of honor." Under this and subsequent orders, Lord Slane and several others of the most ancient Peers in Ireland, who had incurred attainders, during the disastrous periods of 1641 and 1688, were declared the use of their accustomed titles; and from that time until about the end of the last century, when His Majesty King George III. permitted the reversal of several attainders, all such Peers used the words "commonly called" before their titles of honor, and in that manner were styled in all law and equity proceedings; Lord Slane, however, considering himself restored in blood by the English statute just mentioned, presented a petition to the House of Lords in Ireland, praying his writ of summons "that he might take his place as a Peer of this realm," he having been "restored to his blood and title of honor in this kingdom;" but no definitive order was made on this petition, owing to the jealousy then existing, as to the question of the paramount authority of the English legislature, and which authority his Lordship seems to have acknowledged, in obtaining the above statute of reversal.

He was subsequently created (1713), by Queen Anne, Viscount Longford. His Lordship, who was a Lieutenant-General at the Portuguese service, m. Aune, dau. of Sir Patrick Tracy, of Mort., and left one daughter, Halley, who d. in 1741. He d. in 1728, when the Viscountcy of Longford expired, and the Baronetage of Slane became dormant.

- Lord Dunsany was also a claimant to the Slane Peerage, as one of the co-heirs of Christopher, Lord Slane, who had summons in 1613 and 1615, and his Lordship petitioned parliament accordingly, upon the permission that he descended from The Hon. Mary Fleming, only dau. of Randall, Lord Slane, by his first wife, and half-sister of Christopher, Viscount Longford and first Lord Slane; but it has since been established that his Lordship did not derive from that family but from her first husband by a former wife: thus-

- Randall, Lord Slane, left by Eleanor Barnwall, his first wife, an only child, the above-mentioned Mary Fleming, who m. 1st, Richard Fleming, Esq., of Niahomock, and had an only son, James, who d. young.
- Richard Fleming, of Niahomock, was a widower, and had an only daughter by his first wife, Bridget Fleming, who m. Randall Plunket, 11th Lord Dunsany, great-grandfather of the present Lord.

N.B.—According to the Usage of Parliament,
when the House appoints a Select Committee, the Lords appointed to serve upon it are named in the Order of their Rank, beginning with the Highest; and so, when the House sends a Committee to a Conference with the Commons, the Lord highest in Rank is called first, and the rest go forth in like Order:
But when the whole House is called over for any Purpose within the House, or for the Purpose of proceeding forth to Westminster Hall, or upon any public solemnity, the Call begins invariably with the Junior Baron.
"All peers of Scotland shall be peers of Great Britain, and have rank next after the peers of the like degree in England at the time of the Union."—23rd Article of Union with Scotland, confirmed by 5 Anne, cap. 8.

"The Lords of Parliament, on the part of Ireland, shall have the same privileges as the lords on the part of Great Britain; and all the Lords Spiritual of Ireland shall have rank next after the Lords Spiritual of the same rank in Great Britain, and shall enjoy the same privileges (except those depending upon sitting in the House of Lords), and the Temporal Peers of Ireland shall have rank next after the Peers of the like rank in Great Britain at the time of the Union; and all Peersages of Great Britain and Ireland, shall, in all other respects, enjoy the same privileges, except those depending upon sitting in the House of Lords.—Act of Union with Ireland, 30 and 40 Geo. * By the date of Lord Gray's patent, 9th October, 1437, it would seem that his Lordship should precede Lord Forbes, whose creation was in 1449, and at the election of Peers of Scotland, 12th May, 1739, Lord Gray protested for precedence, and against the calling of Lord Forbes, or any other Baron, before himself.

Note.—The foregoing list comprehends all the Peerages extant, excepting minor titles that merge in superior ones of the same kingdom. It must be understood, however, that in many instances two or more dignities centre in one individual: thus—the Duke of Richmond is placed in his precedence as an English Duke, and also as a Scottish one, as Duke of Lennox. The Duke of Leinster is amongst the Dukes in his Irish Dukedom, and amongst the Viscounts in his English Viscounty, &c. &c. Some Lords too enjoy distinct Peerages of the same grade, inherited from different ancestors, and, in such cases, both titles are given, each in its own order of precedence.

BRITISH ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD.

THE MOST HONORABLE ORDER OF THE BATH.

Instituted in 1399. Revised in 1725. Enlarged in 1813.

In the year 1725, King George I. revived the Order of the Bath, which was originally derived from the ceremonial of bathing, which the knights underwent on the vigil of their inauguration, and enacted statutes for its regulation, by which it was ordained to consist of the Sovereign, and thirty-seven Knights Companions.

On 2nd of Jan., 1813, it was declared that, "for the purpose of commemorating the auspicious termination of the long and arduous contest in which this empire has been engaged, the Order should be composed of three classes, viz.

1st. Class—to consist of Knights Grand Crosses, number not to exceed seventy-two, exclusive of the Sovereign and Princess of the Blood Royal; one sixth of which may be appointed for civil services. The remainder must have attained the rank of Major-General in the army, or Rear-Admiral in the navy, and must have been previously appointed to the second class.

2nd Class—Knights Commanders, number, not to exceed, upon the first institution, one hundred and eighty, exclusive of Foreign officers, holding British commissions, of whom not exceeding ten may be admitted as Honorary Knights Commanders. In the event of actions of signal distinction or of future wars, the number of this class may be increased. To be entitled to the distinctive appellation of Knighthood; to have the same rights and privileges as Knights Bachelors, but to take precedence of them; to wear the badge, &c. pendant by a red ribbon round the neck, the star embroidered on the left side. This Class is not now conferred upon any officer below the rank of Major-General in the army, or Rear-Admiral in the navy.

3rd Class—Companions of the Order; not limited in number; they are to take precedence of Esquires, but are not entitled to the appellation, style, &c. of Knights Bachelors. To wear the badge assigned to the third Class, pendant by a narrow red ribbon to the button-hole. No officer can be nominated, unless he shall have received a medal, or other badge of honor, or shall have been especially mentioned in despatches in the London Gazette, as having distinguished himself in action. This class has never been conferred upon any officer below the rank of Major in the Army and Commander in the Navy.

The new Badge for the Military Classes of the Order, is a gold Maltese cross, of eight points, enamelled argent, in the four angles, a lion passant guardant, or; in the centre, the rose, thistle, and shamrock, issuant from a sceptre between three imperial crowns or, within a circle gules; thereon the motto of the Order, surrounded by two branches of laurel proper, issuing from an escrol azure, inscribed Ich Dien (I serve), in letters of gold. It is worn by the Grand Crosses pendant from a red ribbon across the right shoulder, by the Knights Commanders from the neck, and by the Companions from the button-hole.

The Collar is of gold, weighing thirty ounces Troy weight, and is composed of nine imperial crowns, and eight roses, thistle and shamrock, issuing from a sceptre, enamelled in their proper colours, tied or linked together with seventeen gold knots, enamelled white, having the badge of the Order pendant therefrom.

The Star of the Military Grand Crosses is formed of rays, or flames of silver, thereon a gold Maltese cross, and in the centre, within the motto, branches of laurel, issuant as in the badge.

The Civil Knights Grand Crosses retain the old Badge and Star of the Order, which is of silver, formed with eight points or rays, charged with three imperial crowns proper, upon a glory of silver rays, surrounded with a red circle, upon which is the motto of the Order. Their Badge is of gold, and contains a rose issuing from the dexter side of a sceptre, and a thistle from the sinister, all between three imperial crowns encircled by the motto.

The Star of the Knights Commanders is in the form of a cross potée of silver, having the same centre as the Grand Crosses, but without a gold Maltese cross thereon.

BRITISH ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD.

THE MOST DISTINGUISHED ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE.

Instituted 27th April, 1818, by Letters Patent, under the great seal of Great Britain, for Natives of the United States of the Ionian Islands, and of the Island of Malta and its Dependencies, and for such other subjects of his Majesty as may hold high and confidential situations in the Mediterranean.

By Statutes dated 16 Aug., 1832, the Order is to consist of fifteen Knights Grand Crosses exclusive of the Grand Master, twenty Knights Commanders, and twenty-five Cavaliere or Companions.

The Members of the Orders enjoy rank and precedence immediately after the corresponding classes of the Order of the Bath; that is to say, the Knights Grand Crosses after Knights Grand Crosses of the Bath; the Knights Commanders after the Knights Commanders of the Bath; and the Cavaliere and Companions after the Companions of the Bath, with the exception of the six senior Cavaliere, who retain the appellation of British Knighthood ("Sir"), and the precedence assigned to them by the original statutes of April 1818. All natives of the Ionian Islands and of Malta, who receive the third class of the Order, are styled "Cavaliere," and all natives of Great Britain and Ireland "Companions." The Grand Master is the First and Principal Knight Grand Cross, and the Lord High Commissioner has precedence of all other Grand Crosses. The Knights Grand Crosses are entitled to bear supporters, and to encircle their arms with the collar, riband, and motto of the Order. The Knights Commanders and Cavaliere also encircle their arms with the riband and motto; and the Companions suspend the badge of the Order to their arms.

HABIT AND INSIGNIA.

The Star of a Knight Grand Cross is composed of seven rays of silver, having a small ray of gold between each of them, and over all the cross of St. George, gules. In the centre is a representation of the archangel St. Michael encountering Satan, within a blue circle, inscribed with the motto Auspicium Melioris Ævi.

The Collar is formed alternately of lions of England, of Maltese crosses, and of the cyphers S.M and S.G, having, in the centre, the imperial crown, over two winged lions passant gardant, each holding a book, and seven arrows. At the opposite end of the Collar are two similar lions. The whole is of gold, except the crosses, which are of white enamel, and it is linked together by small gold chains.

The Badge is a gold Cross of fourteen points of white enamel, edged with gold, having in the centre, on one side, the archangel St. Michael encountering Satan, and on the other St. George, on horseback, encountering a dragon, within a blue circle, on which the motto of the Order is inscribed. The Cross is surmounted by the imperial crown, and is worn by the Grand Crosses to a wide Saxon blue riband with a scarlet stripe, from the right shoulder to the left side; and on Collar days from the Collar.

The Mantle is of Saxon blue satin, lined with scarlet silk, tied with cordons of blue and scarlet silk and gold, and has on the left side the star of a Knight Grand Cross.

The Chapeau is of blue satin, lined with scarlet, and surmounted with white and black ostrich feathers.

The Knights Commanders wear the badge suspended to a narrower riband from the neck, and have on their left side, a Star composed of four rays, with a small cross of eight points in sable, of silver, surmounted by the cross of St. George, gules, and having the same centre as the star of the Grand Crosses.

The Cavaliere and Companions wear the small cross of the Order from a still narrower riband, at the button-hole of their coats.

Married ladies and widows are entitled to the same rank amongst each other, as their husbands would respectively have borne between themselves, except such rank is merely professional or official; and unmarried ladies to the same rank as their eldest brother would bear amongst men, during the lives of their fathers.

THEMEIONS.—The first name of dignity, next beneath a peer, was anciently that of Fidemans, Fidecommissi, or Fideiavm, who are mentioned by our ancient lawyers, as viri magna dignitatis, and Sir Edward Coke speaks highly of them. Yet they are at present entirely out of use; and our legal antiquities are not agreed upon even their original or ancient office. Now, therefore, the first personal dignity, after the nobility, is a Knight of the Order of St. George, or of the Garter, first instituted by Edward III., anno 1344.—Blackstone.

(a) Lord Great Chamberlain, when in actual performance of official duty, statute 1 George I.

The man in cæsars virtue bold,
Who dares his secret purpose hold,
Unstaken hear the crowd's tumultuous cries,
And the impetuous tyrant's angry brow defies
Let the wild winds that rule the seas

Let Love's dread arm arm with thunder read the spheres, Receash the crush of worlds undaunted he appears. — Francia.

Lamb laird an nochtar. The strongest hand is on high. O'Brien, Bt. The literal translation of this motto is,
"The strongest hand uppermost," but by an alteration of one letter in the last word it will mean "The strongest hand is on high," or "in heaven," and it has been so translated by the Marquis of Thomond, whose motto is in French, "Viguer ou des la".

Lamb derg cirin. The red hand of Ireland. O'Neill, E. In an ancient expedition of some adventurers to Ireland, their leader declared that whoever first touched the shore should possess the territory which he reached. O'Neill, from whom descend the princes of Ulster, bent upon obtaining the reward, and seeing another boat likely to land, cut his hand off and threw it on the coast. Hence the traditional origin of the motto. The red hand was adopted by James the First, as the badge on instituting the order of Baronet.
The design of the institution being the colonization of the province of Ulster, in Ireland, the arms of the province were deemed the most appropriate insignia.

"Faliaur egregie qui quisqu sub principe credit
Servitiam, numquam libertas gravior extat Qasm sub rege plo" . . .

He errs indeed, who thinks it single sway
Should rule the land, 'tis slavery to obey,
A good king's subjects cherish liberty,
No other freemen are so safely free.

Libertate quietem. Quiet in liberty. Woodford, Bt. The sentence is, "Manus habe inimica tyrannia, ense petit placidum sub libertate quietem," written in the album of the University of Copenhagen, by Algernon Sidney, when ambassador from the English commonwealth at the court of Denmark. Sidney also repeated them in the book of mottoes, in the royal library in the same city. He's arm'd without that's innocent within;
Be this thy screen, and this thy wall of brass."—Pope.

Murus venes conscientia sanae. A sound conscience is a wall of brass. Scarborough, E.
Mutas ingloriae artes. Tu exercise amabismus of glory the silent arts. Halford, Bt. This motto is an elegant quotation from the description of the physician Iepis, in the twelfth book of Virgil's Æneid, which has thus been rendered by Dryden:

"Iepis was at hand to prove his art,
Whose blooming youth so fard Apollo's heart,
That, for his love, he profert to bestow
His tuneful harp, and his Ainering bow:
The pious youth, more stidnous how to save
His aged sire, now sinking to the grave,
Preferd the pow'r of plants, and silent praise
Of healing arts, before Thebeam bays."

The medical profession was by no means in honor at Rome. Every senator and rich Roman had his family physician among his own bondmen, and none but slaves practised the art until Augustus made Antonius Musa a freed man: in Greece it was different. Tasso, speaking of Erotilme, when attending on the wounded Tancred, closely imitates the lines of Virgil:

WITH GEORGE MONTAGU, ESQ.

During a period of 65 Years.

"Every letter in this collection is in itself a fund of amusement, and, as throwing a bright light upon the manners of the time in which they were written, invaluable. Those who have before seen this correspondence never had an opportunity of obtaining so good an edition of it as the present; and for those who happen not to have seen it, the very best thing they can do, at the opening of the year 1837, is to buy it."—John Bull.

The style of the work is graceful—in many parts distinguished by passionate eloquence."—Times.

is, at the suggestion of Mr. Hook, incorporated with the NEW MONTHLY, and forms a prominent feature of Wit and Comicality in that Magazine, which is accordingly increased in quantity, and contains various other improvements.

The New Series of Literary Portraits (lately commenced) continues to form a distinguishing embellishment of this Periodical.

The New Monthly Magazine and Humorist for January.—This popular and clever periodical has passed the threshold of the new year under auspices, and with omens, the most propitious. With such wit and various ability as this number displays, it cannot but succeed in reaching a very high place in public estimation. Mr. Theodore Hook, whose services have been secured as editor, is, it is superfluous to say, in himself a host, and many of the most popular and successful writers of the day lend their valuable aid. We have in this number a continuation of the Gurney Papers. Marriage does very well to end a comedy, but real life only begins with it. Mr. Hook introduces us to Gilbert's domestic circle, in which the retired Indian nabob plays an amusing part.—Carlton Chronicle.

Now Complete, in 4 Vols. elegantly bound, price 1L.—or in 20 Numbers, at 1s. each, any of which may be had separately,

The author enjoyed constant opportunities of gratifying our curiosity respecting the Emperor, from living in his household, passing many hours daily in his society, either conversing with him, hearing him read, and comment on, the works of various authors, or writing at his dictation."—Edinburg Review.
